Tattoos Of Memories

Waynesboro High School: The crazy place where the Little Giants gather not only to learn about each other, but also about the ups and downs of life. Thoughts of sitting in extremely long classes and eagerly waiting for the bell to ring at the new time of 3:15, along with forcing one's way through the congested halls with traffic worse than that of downtown Charlottesville, and lugging books home may be the first images that come to mind when we think of Waynesboro High School. "High school is like a roller coaster in the dark, you never know what lies ahead," added Katherine Boling (Sophomore).

This year, as students entered the 98-99 school year, they were faced with a number of changes. Compared to last year's school day which started at 7:55 and ended at 2:30, this year the students had mixed feelings about the new times. Starting school at 8:45 gave most students an extra hour to stay in bed this year (except those in zero period), but that extra hour of comfort was added to make a new ending time of 3:15. "We can't have our cake and eat it, too!" says Michelle Wine, a sophomore at WHS.

Besides the schedule change, the Little Giants (especially seniors) were faced with decreasing parking spaces this year due to the amount of sophomores who received their licenses. "It would be cool if every student had a parking spot, so that students would not have to park across the street," said Bethany Cline (Senior). The class of 1999 was appalled at this, but thanks to the demanding Student Government Association, the problem was quickly resolved.

This year the Giants sure did have their share of change; however, the year as a whole was one of excitement. "This year was great, I'm sure we will all look back and laugh about the little things we have made more out of throughout our high school years," added Gina Moran (sophomore).

Students Kyle Smith, Kerri Coffey, and Danielle Tucker show off their school spirit during a home football game. They gave a standing ovation as the Giants scored yet another touchdown in the game against Charlottesville High School.

With total concentration and skill, student Beth Traynham works diligently to complete her Santa for crafts class. Beth seems to be working very hard to complete her project before Christmas.

Around The World In Seven Days

Many people from the high school traveled over the summer. Some to the Grand Canyon or relatives' homes, others to the New York City or the beach, but chances are no one went to Central America or Europe over the summer except for some lucky Spanish and Latin students.

This summer members of the Spanish and Latin classes at WHS took field trips, to Costa Rica and Italy, where they could use the language skills they acquired in class in a real environment. Well, that's what the teachers wanted them to do, but for the students it was more about having a good time and experiencing new cultures.

At 5:30 a.m. weary Spanish students forced themselves from bed to embark on a tropical adventure in Costa Rica. Even with the excitement felt by the students, getting up at anytime with an "a.m." behind it is hard during the summer. Accompanied by former WHS Spanish teacher, Señora Julie Zook, and a couple of motherly chaperons, the students departed for Costa Rica leaving behind the school they would so dearly miss.

Latin students faced the same start only with more jet lag and twice as many students. After a long flight, the students, led by WHS Latin teacher, Mrs. Kathy Rottenborn, landed in Capri and from there it was a non-stop tour for the students to Rome. Although the bus tour was very fast paced, the travelers were able to take time off in the evenings for relaxing, sightseeing, or clubbing with the locals.

While Latin students were admiring the historic Coliseum, Spanish students were taking dips in the hot-springs of Fortuna, under the massive Arenal volcano. A few of the travelers got some experience in other skills besides Spanish while staying at Monteverde. "The scariest part of the trip was definitely the horseback riding at Monteverde. Not only did I have the craziest horse of the lot, but we were going straight down, in the rain, and the horses were starting to slip on the mud," recalled Junior Gavin Wade of a thrilling experience while in Costa Rica.

Latin students left the country of Italy and traveled to Greece by ferry. They visited the city of Delphi and Athens where they also encountered a scary situation. "The most unnerving part of the trip was that there were no speed limits in Athens. Crossing the street became a problem, especially when trying to move a group of thirty people and drivers haven't discovered the brake pedal." Jay Humphries.

Both groups were able to experience using their language skill to order food in restaurants or talking to locals in the all-night disco-techniques, as well as changing money from dollars to the Costa Rica colon or the Italian lira. "The best part about Costa Rican money is we got to carry 5,000 dollar bills around," explains Junior Holland Hersey.

Although there were some downsides to both trips like repetitious dishes at meals or constant bus breakdowns, but the ups definitely out-weighed the downs. And when asked whether or not they would do it again the answer was a unanimous "yes!"

- Gavin Wade

"I hope nobody sees me here," murmurs Senior Ben Rottenborn as he cautiously checks over the shoulders of Kristen Bashlor and Tiffany Floyd, while seated at the "Ladies Table." Katie Steidle, Megan Van Huss, Sarah Mastorocco, and Katie Carter also enjoyed their seats while they were treated to a "Greek Feast" in Athens, Greece.

"Stay. Stay. Good goat," praises Gavin Wade as he stops by the road-side to talk with a native Costa Rican, of some sorts. While on their trip the Spanish students encountered many exotic and wild animals but this goat was one of the few domesticated animals seen on the trip.

TICK TALK

"Although we learn and use the language in class everyday its good to go somewhere where we actually have to use it."

— Katie Steidle

As senior Sam Warren plays his imaginary trumpet, Juniors Becky Cunningham, Katie Steidle, and Jessi Blosser sing back-up as they wait for their plane to arrive after an exciting trip through Italy. "The hardest part of any trip is trying to amuse yourself during the airport waits," explains Sam Warren even though he seems to have no trouble in that category.

While peering into the massive crater of the Arenal volcano, Spanish students J.R. Estes, Gavin Wade, Lily Dawkins, Matt Herron, Holland Hersey, and Shelly Reitenauer, show off their happy attitudes despite the rough hike to the top. While staying in Fortuna, Costa Rica the students were able to see and even feel the rumbling of the massive volcano.

Taking a moment to relax and huddle, the Spanish group reflects on their adventure so far. Julie Kane, Gavin Wade, Charles Morse, Jamie Newman, Shelly Reitenauer, Sarah Jones, Señora Julie Zook, Andrea Peterson, Candice King, Holland Hersey, Allison Fletcher, Katherine Garber, Former-Senior Brian Hersey, Lily Dawkins, Matt Herron (FMS), and J.R. Estes made up the Spanish Students who participated in the week-long excursion.

STOMP AND SHOUT!

TOUCHDOWN! Great job ladies! Wait....ladies? That's right, one of the highlights of this year's Spirit Week, the Powder Puff football game pumped up everyone's spirit. Girls from all of the classes signed up to play each other while the guys signed up to be coaches or cheerleaders.

Senior Aja Allen said, "Overall this was a fun experience that should be a tradition. However, maybe in future years it will be a little more organized."

The enthusiasm of the Junior class lifted after their awesome win over the Seniors. Coach Brent Harlow said, "It [the win] helped raise Junior class spirit a lot and because it's Spirit Week that's what the Juniors really needed."

Along with the addition of the Powder Puff football game, the usual activities of the bonfire, parade, hall-decorating contest, and the Pep Rally filled the week. At the bonfire/carbash, fireworks lit the night for the enjoyment of the crowd while in the hall-decorating contest the Seniors captured first place with their outstanding depictions of all the Spirit Week dress-up days. The Freshman class put forth an awesome effort, decorating their hall with school spirit that enabled them to gain second place. "We're frustrated that the Seniors won because we put a lot of effort into our hall, but we're glad that we got second place," said Stephanie Lovelady.

Everyone enjoyed dressing up for Spirit Week, which gave them a chance to show their school spirit and have a chance to wear goofy clothes to school at the same time. Cary Adamson had this to say about dressing up: "I wish that Pajama Day was everyday. They're so comfortable!"

Spirit Week concluded with a rowdy Pep Rally that got everyone (including the Sophomore guy cheerleaders) pumped up for the game against Charlottesville. With their energy the Sophomore Powder Puff football cheerleader performed a stunt for the excited crowd to show their spirit

"Rip tits!" Lori Floyd, Nicole Mason, Jennifer Hashagen, Becky Cunningham, Sarah Mastro-rocco, and Katie Steidle huddle to plan the defeat of the seniors and psyche themselves for victory. After stomping the sophomores in the Powder Puff game, the Lady Juniors moved in for the kill on the seniors and proved that they wore tough enough to win.

Stephanie Grounds, Lara Wilson, John Leeth, Allison Tooley, and Daniel Leech carefully plan, cut, and draw for their section of the hall-decorating contest. The seniors proved that the combination of planning and teamwork accomplishes a lot. "In the end [the hall] looked good and we knew we deserved to win!" Lara Wilson.

"Ahhh." Few words can express the mesmerized look on the faces of Ben Lancaster and Lee Wells as they stare in awe of the bonfire. Brent Harlow and Chris Saum stand close to the fire, keeping warm without the use of their jackets. This marked the second year for the bonfire, which burned a jersey of the rival team. Everyone got pumped up for victory against Charlottesville as the black and orange jersey burst into flames.

Brent Wilson expresses his feminine side while participating in Hat Day. Seth Blanchard, Daniel Heatwole, Sean Mowen, David Jones, Geoff Gunther, and Josh Bucher gaze longingly at him unaware that beneath the sun hat sits their friend.

"Go sophomores!" Proving that they've got moves, sophomore cheerleader Daniel Heatwole, Geoff Gunther, Seth Blanchard, Josh Bucher, Lawson Ricketts, Jack Coiner, David Jones, and Brent Wilson put their own twist on familiar cheers to support their Powder Puff players. These guys were so impressive that they even showed off at the Homecoming Pep Rally.

"I can't believe it's me!" says Sara Kirby as she is crowned 1998 Homecoming Queen. Principal Mitch Peeling crowns Sarah, as Senior Court Member, Joel Gordon, looks on. Phillip Patterson was named Homecoming King.

Boogie down, Whitney Collings and Matt Dillon! When asked what was her favorite part of the Moonlight Masquerade was, Whitney said she liked just dancing with her friends.

"I couldn't believe it was me [being crowned Homecoming Queen]. I was so excited. I had never even been on Homecoming Court so I was surprised I was the one."

Dancing in the Moonlight

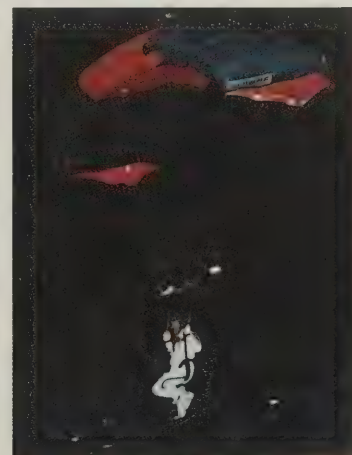

"Come on honey, hurry up! Your date is here." Mom calls up. "I'll be there in a minute." You call down as you put the finishing touches on your makeup. Preparations for the dance are making you crazy. All of this work for one measly little dance. I bet the guys didn't have to go through all of this stress!

When you were finally ready, you probably went out to eat. Some went to South River, Applebee's, Scotto's, or decided to go to Mill Street Grill.

"We had a scary waiter who would not do his job. My date kept trying to carve the pumpkins on the table," said junior Amy Shifflet.

Upon arriving at the Moonlight Masquerade, you may have oohed and aahed at the simple but elegant decorations: twinkling white Christmas lights used as stars, sparkling silver tinsel and sapphire colored tissue paper around a candle in the middle of every table. "When I arrived at the Moonlight Masquerade, I felt sick from my dinner I had just ate, so I had to lay down. Even though I was sick for part of the time, being with my friends made it all worthwhile," explained freshmen Jessica Dillman. For some reason, you decided to postpone dancing and socialized instead. But after awhile, you and the rest of the crowd started to move to the beat. This year, your favorite songs could have been swing songs like "Zoot Suit Riot" and "Jump, Jive, and Wail" or maybe it was one of the line dancing songs like the "Macarena" or the "Electric Slide." No matter what your plans were on that memorable Halloween in 1998, it was no doubt made unique with a Moonlight Masquerade.

"Where are those guys?" was the question on many people's minds while they waited for the ever elusive skydivers to show up with the crowns for the Homecoming King and Queen. Finally they showed up to the delight of the cheering crowds. Skydivers, Inc. of Lynchburg provided the halftime skydiving show.

"Yes, we remember the Macarena!" say sophomores Susan Orkis and Teresa Mendez. Teresa added "This is great, but I'd rather be head banging to 'Smells Like Teen Spirit' by Nirvana again."

Mystery Weekend

"Two thumbs up, way up!" raves Seth Blanchard. "A side splitting comedy. A stellar performance by the entire cast!" says Andrew Humphries. The New York Times calls it "astounding – a whole new twist on the mystery game 'Clue'."

The audience was kept on the edge of their seats the entire performance, from the first time the characters were introduced to the moment Mr. Nye's body was discovered to when the plot was revealed. "The audience was challenged to figure out who the murderer was...a classic 'who done it!'" said Ms. Dianne Wade of one of her favorite aspects of the play she directed.

Creating a suspenseful yet comical performance, cast and crew worked hard the entire week before their performance so they would be able to deliver an enjoyable night for their audience.

Throughout the play, audience members tried their hardest to figure out the question that was on everyone's mind: Who done it? Was it the French maid? One of the mystery lodge 'actors'? The injured scientist? Whoever killed Mr. Nye was doing a wonderful job of covering their tracks, and time was running out to figure out who it was.

After many clues, dead ends, and accusations, everybody thought they knew "who done it," but they were certainly in for a surprise! In a final twist it was revealed that Allen Taylor, an actor at Mystery Lodge and the man that everyone thought had killed Mr. Nye (he had even confessed to the murder) wasn't the murderer at all! Through a revealing speech by the mystery writer Annie Laura Anderson, the fact that Mr. Nye wasn't dead at all – his death had been staged for the Mystery Lodge weekend – was made clear.

In the end all their hard work and dedication to this play paid off for the cast and crew when they heard the applause of the audience and received the compliments of friends and family. "It was such a relief just to see everyone clapping and smiling. Taking that final bow was worth all (the) time and energy put into it," said Sarah Reynolds of her efforts to make the play unforgettable. All in all "Mystery Weekend" was a must see!

– Jo-Beth Boan

"I won't be responsible for the consequences!" yelled Larry (Aaron Robertson, right) to Allen (James Covington, left) in a confrontation that resulted in threats and the two actors losing their jobs at 'Mystery Lodge.' The accidental breaking of their blood bag forced the actors to improvise a mystery for the Mystery Lodge guests.

Begging to keep her job, Mildred Minton, head housekeeper and manager (Sarah Reynolds) pleads her case. She reminds Mr. Nye (Matt Frushour) that she used to own the lodge in a desperate attempt not to get thrown out.

 The dog – Fritz

Big Mama Wells (Tiffany Baker, left), a rich oil well owner from Texas, watches the action with great interest. Accompanied by her beauty queen daughter Portia Wells (Gladys Harwell), the two added much comedy and many clues to the mystery.

Judy, portrayed by Kathryn Garber (center) pours her heart out to famous mystery writer Annie (Jo-Beth Boan, left). Constance (Whitney Collings) and Hal (Matt Dillon) listen in as Judy tells her woeful tale of love. "Please don't tell him I said anything!" Judy exclaims after Mr. Nye fires her boyfriend.

"Who done it?" was the question on every audience member's mind as the mystery unraveled. When the audience arrived, each person was handed pencil and paper to keep up with the clues.

At the end of the day, a third grade student from William Perry Elementary is excited to share her writing with Jennifer Hashagen, a junior. "I really enjoy working with young children. It is a great experience to watch them grow throughout the year," said Jennifer.

As a junior, Ryan Hulton is "taking a lesson" on teaching golf from the asst. golf pro, Scott Graber, at Waynesboro Country Club one afternoon. "The program is interesting and I enjoy learning about my mentor's job," Ryan says.

"When I Grow Up, I Want To Be..."

Have you ever thought about a future career but weren't sure if you would like it or be good at it? Well, many students at Waynesboro High School are giving it a try. They are taking a mentorship and finding out if they are interested in a particular field. Shelly Reitenauer, a senior, said, "I wanted to minor in music and wanted to give teaching music a try."

There are several different locations for the Mentorship Program, depending on the different careers chosen. It may be at the Animal Hospital of Waynesboro, the Waynesboro Country Club, or the police station. Many of the juniors and seniors are even going back to their elementary schools and learning from a very different perspective than they did several years ago. "I've learned how great stickers are, the kids will do anything for them," Stacy Hullett, a junior, observed after taking her mentorship at Ladd Elementary School.

The Mentorship Program provides an opportunity for students to experience a professional career. "My goal is to become a pilot. The best way to do that is to be around a running airport," remarked senior Juan Mendez, a mentor at the Weyers Cave Airport. This program reaches out to highly motivated juniors and seniors who want to obtain skills required for different types of work. It is an opportunity to meet and work with professionals in a particular field of interest. There is nothing better than a "hands-on" experience in the real world when juniors and seniors are focused on what they want to be "when they grow up!"

— Julie Kane

"Does this person have a record?" Jeff Finke, a senior, asks a Waynesboro policeman. Jeff works at his mentorship after school at the Waynesboro Police Station.

It is "storytime" in the library at Westwood Hills Elementary. Casey Severs tries to ask a kindergarten about her story one afternoon, but unfortunately she is only interested in smiling for the camera.

Top Ten: The Best of the Past & Other Student Favorites

"Raindrops on roses and whiskers on kittens. Bright copper kettles and warm woolen mittens. Brown paper packages tied up with string. These are a few of my favorite things."

Sure, we have all heard of this well known song from the movie Sound of Music but these may not exactly be your favorite things. That is why the students of Waynesboro High have been chosen to voice their favorites and what they think should be at the top of the list. From the number one place to go in the world to the top school activity, many students had their own opinions. There were choices, however, that stood out and those were the ones that climbed to the number one spots. And even though the choices may change over time, these were the best of the years 1998 and 1999.

— By Jessica Keicher

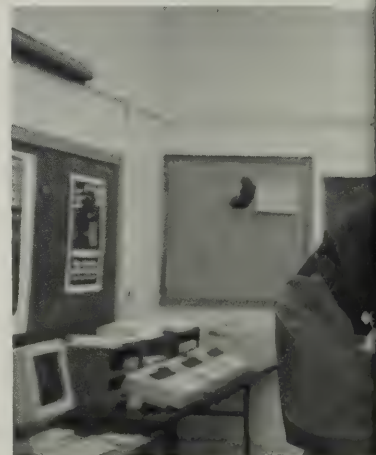

Favorite school activity? Pep rallies. Here, the Little Giant takes a ride around the gym as Beth Traynham, Candace Dyke, Heath Conyers, and Holland Hershey, with the other craft students, parade in front of the cheering students at the Homecoming pep rally. Some of the students got together to make the model for a Homecoming present to the school.

Ok! You have your popcorn, Gobstoppers, and M&Ms, now all you need is the movie. Here are the top three movies...

- Coming in at third place was Money Talks
- Winning the silver is Jack Nicholson, Helen Hunt, and Greg Kinnear in As Good As It Gets Drum roll please...
- And the number one movie (and ship) is Titanic.

TAILGATES & TOILET-PAPER

At the end of each school day students jam the hallways to get home. Some race to their buses while others lumber down the streets to get to their houses, but where do most students at Waynesboro High School go? The back parking lot! Students can be found each day in a large crowd just talking and catching up with what happened during the course of the day. Some of the underclassmen walk outside to find that their cars have been toilet-papered by seniors who disapproved of them parking in the senior lot. When asked how he felt when a fellow student gets his car trashed, junior Dan "Da Man" Freeman said, "It brings excitement to the school. This place is not very fun; therefore, we have to make it fun by any means necessary!"

During Spirit Week students, parents, and faculty were found tailgating at the Homecoming football game. The band Rumors played while the crowd got pepped for the game. People enjoyed the meals provided by John Boy's Chicken. Students, as well as parents and faculty, were dressed in purple and gold to show their spirit for the game against the Charlottesville Knights.

So whether you drive or just wait for a ride make sure you are a part of the excitement in the back parking lot!

Students like Erik Henderson, Becca Cook, Lori Cash, and Brandon Wooten, stand around the back parking lot chatting about all the excitement of the school day.

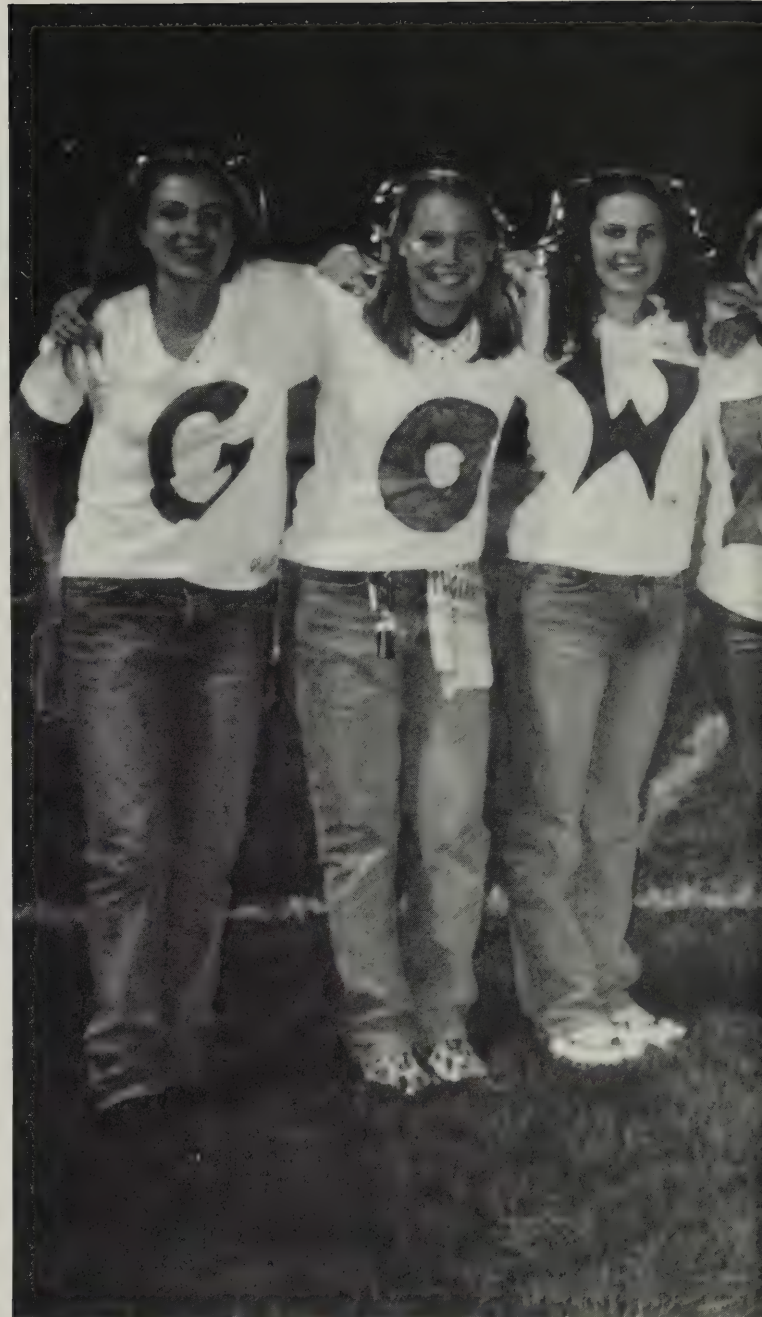

To get the crowd pumped for the Homecoming game, Rumors played some great music and really got the crowd going. This is the second year that the back parking lot was used for tailgating and Homecoming festivities.

SPIRIT THAT ROCKS THE NATION

Most people think that a person with school spirit is the person that always yells loudly at pep rallies or goes to every school related activity. This isn't true in the slightest. Junior Brandon Wooten notices that "school spirit makes high school the best time of our lives." You don't have to paint your chests or jump around to have school spirit. There are many different kinds of school spirit. There are the crazy and erratic people, there are the people that cheer only when necessary and clap only when it is appropriate, there are also the people who only come to an event to enjoy the sights and sit quietly taking in all. Senior Kimmi Schurz points out that "spirit is something that brings together all different people." All of these personalities play an important part in creating a school spirited group of students. As freshman Scott Hashagen says, "Participating in spirit related things has helped me become more part of this school."

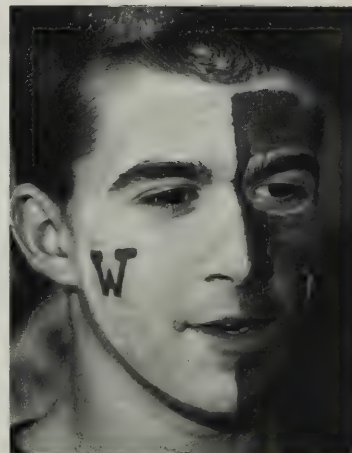

When all those personalities gather together at a sporting event they create quite a sight. Superb cheerleaders supported by a crowd containing all sorts of fans make for one of the best groups of student fans in the area. Sophomore Tim Meade observes that "school spirit is a necessary part of any school, especially ours." It's no wonder that almost every sporting event involving WHS turns out a rollicking crowd of high school fans.

By Brent Wilson

Leaping high above the gymnasium floor juniors Becky Cunningham, Sarah Riling, and Holland Hersey show why being school spirited is so much fun, especially at pep rallies.

Freshman Matt Fitzgerald proudly displays his colorful facial paint that loudly declares the school spirit that permeates the very essence of Waynesboro High School.

What do you think of the school spirit at WHS?

"In the past year and a half that I have been at WHS the change in spirit, both team and school, has been remarkable. We have had many district, regional, and two state championships in that time. Participation on athletic teams is rising and fan support has been great."

— Principal, Mark Peeling

Sporting wigs and paint, sophomores Dan Heatwole, Geoff Gunther, and Seth Blanchard brave the freezing temperatures to display their bare chests and their school spirit at a football game.

Grouped together with large smiling faces a group of WHS girls prepare to dash quickly onto the field at the half time of a football game to present their home-made T-shirts that openly support the football team.

Sophomores Brandon Nicholas and Til Maddox allow Ms. Wimberger to apply some finishing touches to their outfits on Purple and Gold Day as they prepare to rally with other classmates in the gym.

All Creatures Great and Small

When you see your neighbor with a Scotch terrier dressed in a kilt or a lady carrying a Chihuahua with a sweater, you become aware of just how important pets are to people. Besides cats and dogs, WHS students also own unique pets such as frogs, snakes, tarantulas, hermit crabs and horses. A pet can reflect people's personalities and reveal how they express themselves. Senior Caleb Dorando owns two peacocks and says that his pets reflect his personality because "they are loud."

Pets offer unconditional love and meet people's needs. Students describe the extra responsibilities that come with having an unusual pet. Junior Stacy Hullet spends hours grooming her horse, Mustard, every day while Brian Dawson keeps the temperature in the house constant with a heat rock for his Komodo dragon. Another student makes sure her snakes swallow the live rats she feeds them.

Among some of the owners' most memorable experiences with their pet was when one of Caleb's peacocks flew through a window. Another student, Brian Dawson, describes the experience of watching his dragon grow from three inches to nearly four feet over the course of one and a half years. -

Another student enjoys the reactions that her snakes get from people. "People are afraid, but during the summer when at Sherando Lake, two girls who were visiting took a picture of the snakes." The others mentioned that the reaction their pet receives from others varies from person to person. Brian Dawson says, "My girlfriend doesn't like the dragon because it bites. They like the chinchilla. Walking the dragon on a leash is pretty cool."

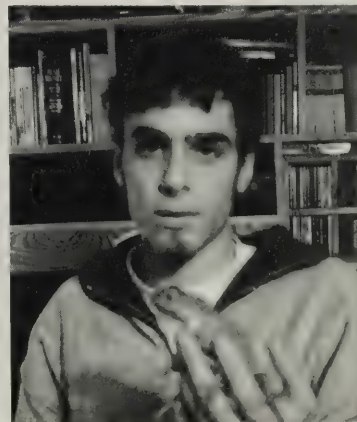

So when you see that lady with the sweated Chihuahua or the kilted Scottish terrier, don't laugh at her - it's just one of her children.

Holding her remarkable pet Squeaky, Stacy Hullet displays a Depreci, or African rodent. "He can hang by his tail," remarked Stacy about Squeaky's abilities.

Hanging out with his reptile friend, Caleb Dorando spends some quality time with his iguana, Mojo. "There's nothing special about him, he's just an iguana," said Caleb.

Sheena Bullock and her father share a dance together at Mary Baldwin College, the site of the Finals Dance. It is a WHS tradition to share a dance with mom or dad after the turning of the rings. This year the DJ played "I Will Remember You" for this touching Finals Dance moment.

In the year that bands like Big Bad Voodoo Daddy made swing come back into vogue, it was no surprise that the swinging moves of Aaron Robertson and Erica Campaigne were such a hit. The duo "wowed" the crowd with their dancing.

"The best part of the Finals Dance was waiting to see if J.R. Estes would actually get out on the floor and breakdance."

— Brian Willis

Party Like It's 1999!

New traditions abounded at the WHS Finals Dance. In addition to the traditional turning of the rings, followed by a dance with one's parents, the class of 1999 gave the Finals Dance a new twist.

The seniors started the evening off a bit differently as they shed their jackets due to the intense heat. Mary Baldwin College, where the dance was held, did not have air conditioning. That fact soon came into play when couples started to compete in a first-ever dance competition. Seniors were impressed with the talent of their peers like Aaron Robertson and Erica Campaigne who showed the crowd their trademark swing moves.

The crowd was also amused at the possibility of seeing J.R. Estes "break it down" to the beat of Vanilla Ice. However, J.R. decided to keep his signature moves a thing of the past, as his break-dancing days stayed in the closet.

The grand finale came when an unusual pairing took center stage – Matt Houtaling and Scott Breeden. This hardly "romantic" couple were "down home" as they did a little flat-footin' to "Cotton-Eyed Joe." Jeff Finke, an onlooker, said that he thought the dancing duo "was just crazy."

The crazier moments were offset by the more touching ones like when the DJ played "I Will Remember You" as parents danced with their sons and daughters. Many teary eyes were spotted among the crowd as parents took pride in their children.

The night did not roll to a halt when the dance ended at 11:30 ... the party continued at the YMCA. The after-prom party had food, activities, and a few surprises. Brian Willis said, "one of the biggest surprises of the after-prom party was seeing Lara Wilson cut loose and dance solo." Lara's alter ego seemed to be in step with the theme of the night, which appeared to be about making new traditions and doing things a little different than usual.

After the turning of her ring, Sara Kirby dances the first dance with her father.

Scott Breeden and Matt Houghtaling create a memorable moment as they break it down to "Cotton-Eyed Joe." This country-style tune, mixed with some modern dance beats made for interesting entertainment at the dance.

Enjoy the Ride

As the early morning sunshine baked down, parents and family members gathered together to be seated on the football field. A new tradition started allowing graduates two people on the field to participate more actively in the ceremony. Fighting their way to the front, several parents tackled each other in their effort to get the best view of their child. Their thoughts and attentions quickly turned to more important matters as their son or daughter proceeded to their seats.

Speaking on behalf of the class of 1999, Beth Traynham, Class President, announced the senior gift: a tree which in the hopes of the class would continue to grow and give to the community of Waynesboro High School. Following Beth, Ben Rottenborn delivered the valedictorian speech, involving the crowd with phrases from everyday life. Giving advice to the senior class in the words of a car company, he said, "Enjoy the ride." Several other men and women spoke to the class, but the most memorable moment was when the diplomas were handed out and tassels turned. Confetti and silly string flew into the air as the seniors were pronounced graduated. They expressed their joy at finally ending a four year journey filled with many memories to last their lives.

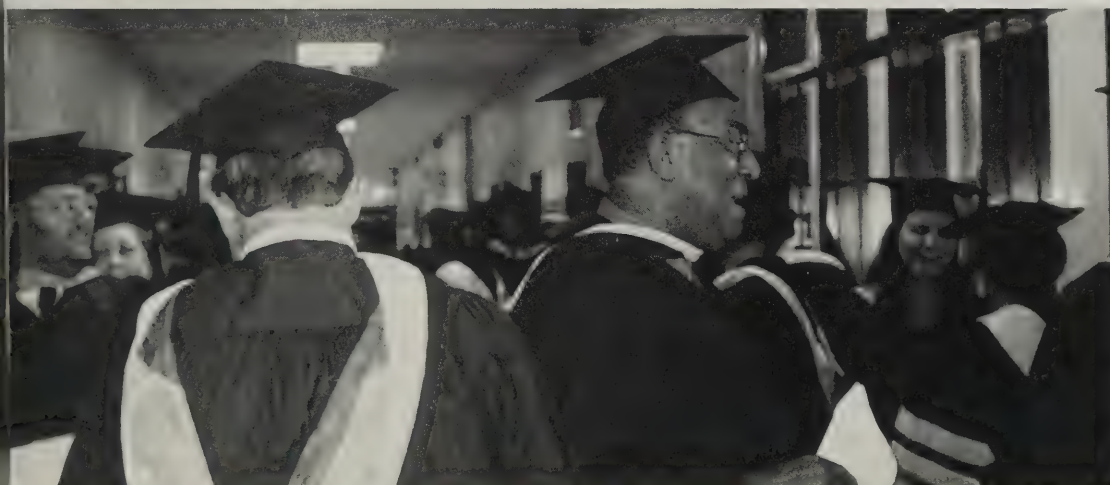

by: Amy Shifflett and Jennifer Holder

Speaker Emily Couric addresses the senior class advising them to respect their families, community, and themselves. Despite her sound advice, the students were more thrilled with a beachball and thoughts of vacation.

Preparing to graduate, members of the senior class practice filing to their seats for the beginning of the ceremony. Many students felt it unnecessary to practice because it was second nature to them.

Kimmie Schurz smiles after receiving her diploma, thinking ahead to the summer days she will spend on vacation before heading off to college to start a new chapter in her life.

Senior sponsor Mrs. Gill, senior teachers Mr. Shifflett and Mr. Clayborne, and others gather together in the hallway to organize themselves before leading the graduation processional.

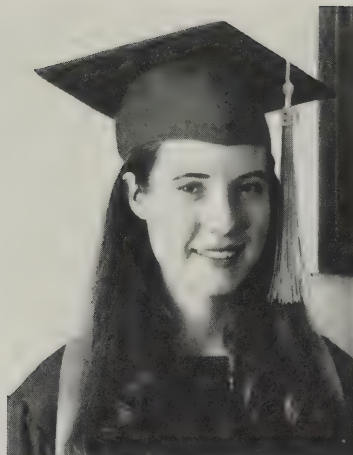

With the world at his feet, valedictorian Ben Rottenborn proudly takes his final steps off the football field as a WHS student. Faculty members formed rows around the departing Class of 1999 to wish them one last farewell.

Snapping a candid picture, India Fairfax captures the final moments of high school life. Clicking cameras could be heard across the field as parents and graduates tried to hold on to the memories.

Lessons Learned in Time

High school is considered the most important time in a student's life. It is where a person decides how to live the rest of his or her life. More importantly, though, it is where friends and friendships are discovered and forged. Junior Jo-Beth Boan says, "High school has given me many opportunities to meet friends." Friends from high school can last a lifetime, as an old Chinese proverb says: "New friends are like silver, while old friends are like gold."

What should I wear today? If you are like most students, this may be a question you ask yourself every morning before getting ready for school. Clothing for teenagers is a way of expressing likes, dislikes and attitude. Are you crazy, weird or even a straight A student? These are just a few of the questions that can be answered by one's dress. As you may have noticed, WHS has a few fashions that are extremely popular among the students. Most males in the freshman population have been spotted wearing khaki pants and a cool American Eagle top along with a smooth pair of Nikes. On the other hand, a lot of students wear clothing that expresses what the student himself likes to do or what he believes in, such as camouflage, cowboy boots and a wide variety of neon hair dye. Some females at WHS also are big fans of the American Eagle store. Most girls tend to be seen wearing jeans with a sharp looking tanktop. "Waynesboro High School surely dresses with class," said sophomore Amy Wachtel. "I prefer to dress comfortably, there is no need to dress up if all we are going to do is sit in class," added sophomore Keith Brickley.

Have you ever glanced over at one of your teachers, and happened to notice just what it is or what name brand of clothing he or she is wearing? It may be hard to say but the teachers at WHS sure do sport some cool and often classic brands of clothing. Let's take Mr. Covington, for example. Have you ever noticed that awesome bowtie that seems to add a bit of spunk to his everyday dress? What about Mrs. Moore's often cultural and authentic taste? Just like you and I, our teachers are faced with that inevitable question of what to wear.

"The 1999 school year has ended with a cool and yet stylish taste once again, I can't wait until next year to see just what will be in and out among my fellow students," said sophomore Katherine Bolling. "Clothing is a very important necessity to many teens, and just the fact that our school's population is made up of so many varieties of styles, makes Waynesboro High even better than all the rest," said senior Bethany Cline.

Binng! It's the beginning of another great school year. Seniors have left, every class has moved one year closer to graduation, and the Class of '02 has arrived. Once they shuffle into class, they will stay for a full 90 minutes. This block can be tough to get used to. One thing upperclassmen don't think about, but is a big deal to some freshmen, is block scheduling. Coming from Kate Collins is a big step for freshmen, but most deal with it graciously. Freshman Aric Berg said he likes block scheduling because "You get more time in class so you don't have as much homework so you have more time for after school activities and sports."

While waiting for the bell to ring to let them out of their third block, freshmen Mary Wickham Yancey, Stephanie Lovelady, Sara Wilson, and Elizabeth Anderson wait at the door. Mary said she "liked block scheduling better because it gave her time to do homework."

During the first week, the freshmen sometimes get lost in the shuffle, but this year most handled the problem of finding new classrooms like experienced high school students. "If I got lost, I could probably find my way," said freshman Mary Wickham Yancey. "I didn't get lost, but since it was my freshman year, I didn't know where the classes were, but block scheduling wasn't a problem," said freshman Sarah Caulkins. Even the schedule changes caused by snow didn't faze the students. Then again, some students just couldn't find their way. Freshman Scott Hashagen is "Always confused."

Each year, it seems, more and more students are pouring into the hallways of Waynesboro High School. Often hidden among the more outgoing students are the few who are not noticed as much, yet have great talents that only some get to see. Erik Richards is one of these people. Although he spends much of his time running, swimming for the park Piranhas, and playing his bass clarinet, he also has a very artistic hand at drawing buildings and architecture. "I take pictures of buildings and stuff and spread them out, add more onto them, or make them better." When he is not busy with his school work or hobbies, he usually likes to play on his play station or do a little workin' out on his work bench.

As for school sports, he is on both the cross country and track teams. He has won a few one- and two-mile races, and hopes to get a scholarship to a college for running. What else is in the future of this freshman? He would like to be an architect and keep on becoming better at playing his bass clarinet. Erik has a little advice for those who still have dreams that need to be reached: "I believe (you should) try your hardest at anything you do." So as you are walking around the school next time, see if you can pick out some people that have hidden talents and try to bring them out into the spotlight.

When Andrew Humphries was asked what his pet peeve was, "lack of spicy fries at lunch" was his answer. "Why call the fries spicy, if they aren't?"

Pet Peeve: An object of dislike or annoyance. We all have that one pet peeve that is sure to irritate us. For some, their pet peeve is how certain clothes items are worn, while others just cannot stand how others act. "I hate socks that come up to the knees," complained freshman Mary Yancey. Britney Hatcher has a different opinion, she said that it is annoying when "people finish off your lunch."

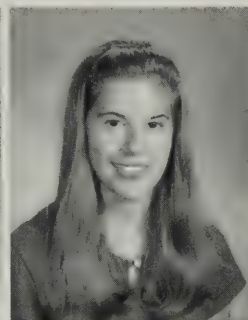

So, WHS, what gets under your skin?

projects due; sports commitments, and not enough time to get everything done. But, one cause of stress that many people probably overlook is 9th grade! Entering high school for the first time, is a very stressful experience for students because they have no idea what to expect. This could be the reason that whenever you see someone pigging out on junk food, chances are, he or she is a Freshman. Ninth grader, Sol Stella replied, "I just love how Rolos taste!" Students will find any reason to eat junk food, and at any time! Freshman, Jan O'Brien, whose favorite junk food are the irresistible flavor-changing Gobstoppers, said, "I eat them all the time!" Despite the many different varieties of junk food tastes, it looks like chips win out! Ninth grader Shawn Grounds, when asked what his favorite junk food was, replied "Chips. Potato chips." And, Freshman, C.W. Lowery said, "Chips." Simply put, but it's easy to see that chips are clearly the favorite junk food around Waynesboro High School!

Freshman Lee Wells stands before the blazing flames of the Homecoming bonfire in support of his team and school. Lee said, "It was so cool to watch the Charlottesville mascot burn."

As the freshman class entered the gym for its first ever pep rally, the upperclassmen booed them. It is a tradition we all went through. We all wondered if they could match up to the spirit of last year's freshman class. Did they? Well, the Class of 2002 did not win the spirit stick, but they did win second place in the hall decorating contest during the Homecoming Spirit Week. Kim Mabry, a freshman, said, "I think we did a great job decorating the hall and we put a lot of time and work into it."

The Class of 2002 did show its Giant Spirit at pep rallies and other school activities like dances, sporting events, concerts and plays. When it came time to show their school spirit they did, they were not shy about it either. When it was their turn to stand up and cheer their little brains out for their class they did. Freshman class president, Christi Mayo said, "We did a great job at the pep rallies, considering it is our first year at WHS. We'll even show more school spirit next year."

As the end of the year rolls around the Class of 2002 has matured into sophomores. They have a better look at high school life and how much fun it is to show their Giant Spirit.

Some people hate reading. Either it takes a supreme effort in order to get through a novel that is assigned in English class, or they rent the movie based on the novel. To help foster the love of reading, the WHS Media Center participated in the Read Across America challenge. "The Read Across America program is a reading challenge in partnership with the World Book Encyclopedia," says media specialist Virginia Wallace. Each person that participated in the contest had to read five books in five weeks. If that sounds strenuous, it may not seem so taxing since the program considered 100 pages as a book. The contest was for five weeks and each participant read 100 pages a week. This goal has not only been met by the participants but some exceeded it. In fact, two participants in Read Across America read 6,000 pages each! Sophomore David Jones read The Little Blue Brontosaurus and decorated a cake with the book's cover design. Not only did they meet the 500 page goal, but they also collected pledges. For every 3 dollars the school collected in pledges, one dollar was given to the school. The students who participated in Read Across America received certificates, medals and a complimentary breakfast. Dee Moyer felt the incentive was "to enhance reading skills and comprehension." The contest ended on May 17 with the breakfast. "I'd love to see more participate next year," stated Mrs. Wallace. Now doesn't reading sound ...fun?

It is a little known fact that walking around our school can be more of a scavenger hunt rather than a chore. Sophomore Katherine Boling shows her most prized possession. Her most treasured item is the watch shown. Katherine received this watch two years ago from her grandfather, who she loves much. "I feel lost without my watch," added Katherine.

Teenagers have certain priorities in life. One of the most important things is talking to friends, not only in school, but also at home, on the job, and at social activities. They want to know what is going on, where it is being held, and who is going to be there. A few of the ways teenagers know these plans are through the telephone and computer.

In a teenager's life, the telephone is their most prized possession. It seems as soon as they walk in the door the phone rings and it is one of their friends. "I usually spend three hours a day talking on the phone," responds Katherine Boling. Some people can't even wait to get home to use the phone. Instead, they use a cellular phone wherever they go.

Another way teenagers communicate is on the internet, through e-mail or Instant Messenger. Ryan Ostrander says, "E-mail enables teenagers to talk over the computer with their friends. It's a fun thing to do when you are really bored." They make their weekend plans and talk about all the recent high school news. It is a great way to chat with friends. "I love to use Instant Messenger because I can talk to lots of people at once. I have talked to twelve friends at one time before," responds Lawson Ricketts.

Whether it be with the telephone or the computer, a teenager's priority is spending time with friends.

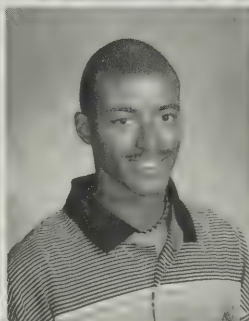

Wes Love is proud to display his favorite hat. Wes calls this hat his most prized possession. "I am not too sure why this hat means so much to me, its just one of those things that I feel lost without," said sophomore Wes.

Spokesperson for The Gap – or happy-go-lucky sophomore? Definitely the latter, Alexis Gaskins is always willing to flash that famous cheerleader smile despite her hectic daytime schedule.

3:30 A.M. is not a pleasant time to be woken up by a screeching electronic doll. However, that seemed to be the general observation of the sophomore class, who was granted the burden of being teen parents. Through the Family Life Education program, the "Baby Think It Over"

Phyllis Nicholson and Roger Morris cradle their "babies" at track practice, making sure to hold them properly so they would not record any abusive treatment or neglect. Phyllis Nicholson said, "Now I know for sure that I won't have a baby until I'm ready."

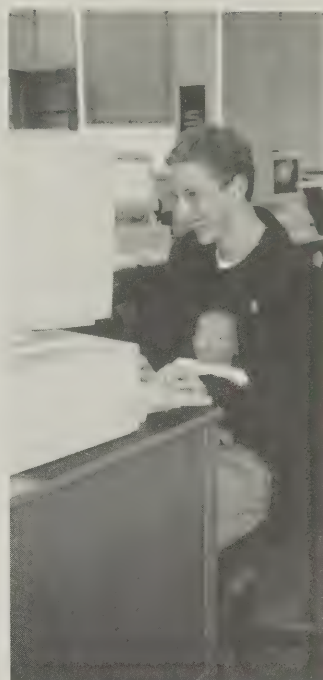

infant simulators were distributed to the tenth graders.

The "babies" were programmed to record any abusive treatment and neglect. "The baby really ruined my night, it woke me up almost every hour. I wasn't happy," says sophomore Crystal Dettweiler. The babies were distributed on a Friday and gratefully returned before school on Monday morning. In addition to learning about how a baby can change their schedules, students also became aware of just how expensive it is to take care of a child.

Although the majority of the sophomore class was leashed with the doll for a weekend, a few only had them for a night. Sophomore Lanell Randolph comments, "It ruined everything, I hated it, it never stopped crying."

The infant simulators were handed out to teach teenagers that children are a heavy burden to be placed on young shoulders – a lesson much needed for the future of tomorrow.

Lawson Ricketts carefully holds his Baby Think It Over, Wilbur, while diligently working in the computer lab to complete an assignment. The sophomore class experienced parenthood with these "babies" to understand the responsibility involved in having a baby.

Sophomores Katie Powers and David Van Covern are seen all through the halls just hanging out. Katie said "Guys and girls can be just friends as long as they both realize that is all it is."

All through the hallways of Waynesboro High School, guys and girls can be seen holding hands, laughing and talking together, and sitting together at lunch. Most of the time these guys and girls are just friends. Yeah right! Seriously, these people are just a couple of friends who can get together and just hang out without those puppy love feelings. Guys and girls are always going to the movies together, going to dinner and hanging out at each other's houses – just as friends. The best thing about having a friend of the opposite sex according to sophomore Katie Powers, is that, "You can get a different perspective of something and a different opinion on different things."

If you don't believe guys and girls can

A bunch o' buddies if we ever saw one! Sophomores Stephen DeFranco, Erin Akens, Susan Orkis, and Larissa Gordon pal around during lunch on an English class field trip.

"America: The Land of Opportunity." This is how many people coming from other parts of the world often view our country. Today, some students still see it that way. This year we are hosting students from Venezuela, Brazil, France, Germany, and other countries, who are experiencing a little taste of American life. "Almost everything is different. The school, the way of life or even the relationships with your friends," says French student Coralie Ferrari, when contrasting the two countries. Besides missing friends and family at home, they seem to enjoy the different language, food, and friendly people. All the students had to take a certain amount of English classes but other than that, they came somewhat unprepared. "At first I couldn't understand what everyone was saying," says Viviane Theophilo from Brazil. They all deserve applause for their commitment to learning our way of speaking and living. For being such great friends and bringing a beautiful diversity to our school, we say, Merci, Danke, and Gracias!

Andrea Worsing and Coralie Ferrari were also exchange students at WHS. Andrea is from Germany and when she returns home she will still have two more years of school (due to the fact that they have 13 years of school there). Coralie visited Waynesboro from France. She was hosted by the families of Jessi Blosser, Meredith Massie, and James Mahoney.

"Crutches aren't too bad, when you get attention," said Rachel Miller. Dustin Jones and Amy Shufflett provided her with not only an extra hand or two, but their companionship as well.

An unusual trend hit the Waynesboro High junior class the second semester...crutches. Ah, yes, a growing number of students were seen thumping down the hall as these poor souls felt the repercussions of spring sports and risky activity. "I got kicked in a soccer game," said Lori Floyd, who hoped to recover in time for Districts. Kristen Bashlor, another junior and best friend of Lori, suffered a somewhat similar occurrence several days prior, receiving a hairline fracture. "It was funny that we had the same problem at the same time and that we both were considered 'cripple,'" continued Lori. "We would limp around the mall, hopping around on the same foot!"

Sometimes being a klutz is hereditary, but, in the case of first period English 11A, it runs in Mr. Hahn's class! "Courtney [Slaton], Scott [Krzastek], Jessica [Keicher], and me all hurt our left feet," Rachel Miller laughed at her clumsy classmates. "I think it's hilarious that everyone hurt their feet at the same time!" To create a more visible image of the exact number of victims, the elevator, still warm from its now routine trips, was used so frequently that there may as well have been a waiting list (no, make that a ticket booth) to allow for "rides." While the elevator may find itself lonesome over the well-deserved summer vacation, it is certain that the dysfunctional students confined to these wooden accessories will have no problem losing the spare legs.

by Jennifer Holder

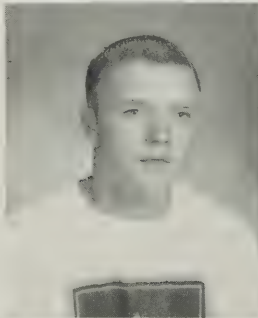

When it comes down to the big soccer game, Mandy Fowler realizes that four legs are just two too many. However, she was still seen dashing down the halls, despite her injury.

There's always work to be done. In high school, there are so many things going on: football games, pep rallies, dances, cook-outs, choir shows and athletic banquets. But among all the activities there is also school work. Every week there are projects to do and tests to study for. Some teachers try to give assignments that will be enjoyable for the students that they will benefit from. For example, Mr. Hahn's 11th grade English classes were given an assignment to make a tee shirt displaying their favorite poems or quotes from their favorite author. The students were to wear their shirts all day to get full credit. Junior Jackie Wright said "I really enjoyed this assignment because we got to learn about poetry and other people's personalities." This was one way to get students focused on their work and also on others. "Sometimes it was hard to focus on doing my school work because I was so excited about what was going to happen that night," said Becky Cunningham. However, staying focused and getting work done all pays off at the end. High school is fun but it is hard work too.

Antonio Vera, a junior, has enjoyed his years in America and especially at Waynesboro High School. He says, "Although it was hard learning English, I look forward to going to school everyday and talking with my friends at my locker."

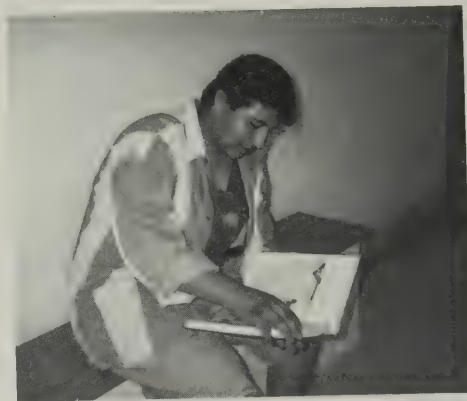

Would you believe one of Waynesboro High School's finest students once made low grades and got in trouble most days? Well, this student was Antonio Vera and he remembers, "My mom used to get called to the office at least once a week." Antonio grew up in Michoacan, Mexico and came to America when he was twelve for a better lifestyle. Along with his family, he had a rough life. Although it was hard leaving family and friends, Antonio was excited to come to America.

Antonio and his family traveled for a week to Virginia in August of 1993 and started a new life. They faced many changes such as not liking the food and not knowing anyone. One of the major challenges that they experienced was not being able to speak English. Everyday a friend of his would come over and tutor his family for an hour or two.

As time progressed, they adapted to this new life. Antonio and his family learned English and adjusted to America. Now, Antonio is attend ing Governor's School and is maintaining good grades. Antonio and his family have enjoyed making their home in America.

- Julie Kane

Even though it is break at Waynesboro High School, Antonio Vera continues to study for his history test. He hopes he will get a good grade next period.

After anesthetizing the fruit flies with ether, senior Amber Kelso observes them through a microscope. The Biology II class breeds fruit flies in studying the role of recessive and dominant traits in genetics.

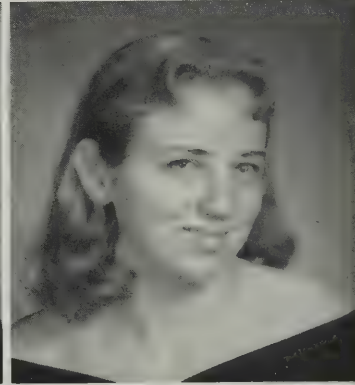

Fetal pig dissection. Speed and velocity experiments. Aerodynamics. Identifying microbes. These are lab experiments that you may have done or are about to do in your science classes. In Earth Science, Biology, Chemistry, or Physics, strapping on a pair of goggles and observing what happens in a test tube or organism is almost an everyday thing. "I like the bacteria labs from Biology II," says biology teacher Bill Corwin, when asked about his favorite labs. Biology II also does an experiment on crossbreeding fruit flies for certain traits such as small vestigial or regular wings and red or white eyes. When asked what was the grossest thing about being in Biology II, senior Amber Kelso said "Though I don't find the stuff gross, it's probably the fruit flies." In Curtis Barker's Physics class, seniors have done projects ranging from using roller coaster to illustrate the concept of kinetic and potential energy to elasticity to surfing to "Bungee Barbie." "Bungee Barbie" was a project by Amber Kelso that demonstrated the physics of bungee jumping such as gravity and spring effects. "My favorite part of Physics was at the end of the year projects," said LaSaundra Logan. With unique experiments and fascinating concepts, it proves there's more to science than just book work.

Demonstrating with water guns, seniors LaSaundra Logan and LeAndra Cabbage illustrate water pressure. Other physics projects involved such topics as G forces and velocity using rocket launches and golf balls, respectively.

Olivia Yancey gets a big birthday surprise as her sister and friends decorated her car for her 17th birthday. "I was so surprised and embarrassed," said Olivia.

Toilet papering cars is a classic way to say "Happy Birthday" or get someone back for a prank they pulled on you. Every year many cars are enwrapped in toilet paper, heaped with trash, and covered with shaving cream by unscrupulous seniors because the unsuspecting victim parked their car in the ever-elusive "senior parking lot." Senior Allison Tooley, thought her car pranking days were over until one afternoon Coach Kimmit and Coach Austin, her volleyball coaches, got her back for toilet papering their cars. As she approached her car she noticed it was bursting with styrofoam peanuts. Everyone began to gather around her car, laughing and helping her clean out her vehicle. When asked about the incident Coach Kimmit replied, "What car thing?" While we're not sure what that means, Mrs. Kimmit assured us that the victims of the car pranks would know what it meant.

Shocked by the atrocity of a surprise prank, Allison Tooley stands back and surveys the damage done to her car, as her friends laugh and help her clean her automobile.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I give you the Waynesboro High School Senior Class of 1999!" Nearly two hundred purple graduation caps go flying into the air. The field is filled with people hugging, laughing, talking, crying, and hugging some more. In this group are scholars, athletes and friends, all of them new graduates. This is the Class of 1999.

At the end of the summer, these new graduates, who will have gotten used to the idea by then of not going back to high school, will be moving on to a new chapter in their lives. Many will pack their bags and move away to college. Some will move into their place in the U.S. military. Many others will get jobs.

The University of Virginia will claim several of our graduates, one of them in particular is Melanie Matthews. After running cross country and distance in track for all four of her high school years, Melanie will continue to run while attending UVA, where she plans to major in biology. "I'm looking forward to continuing [running] at UVA. It will be a challenge, but I think I'm ready for it."

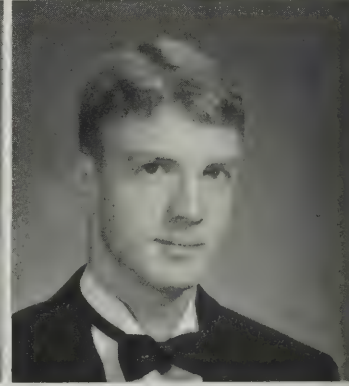

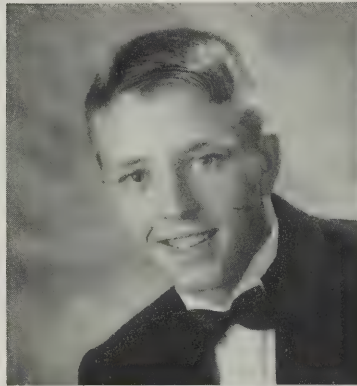

Other WHS graduates will head out of state for college, among them Erica Campaigne. While at Syracuse University (in Syracuse, New York), Erica will be majoring in drama with an emphasis on acting, and will perform in a variety of plays as a result. "It's really exciting," says Campaigne, "I wasn't sure if I would make it, but I did, and now I'm going to Syracuse!" What are her main goals while at Syracuse? "I hope to spend the majority of my time improving on my acting abilities so that I'll be ready for the professional theater world when I graduate."

Fast forward to May 2004. "Ladies and gentlemen, I give you the graduating class of 2004!" All across the country, thousands of graduation caps of various colors fly into the air. Everywhere, people are hugging, talking, crying, and hugging some more. In this group are doctors, actors, lawyers, athletes, scientists and friends, all of them new graduates. Who are these people? This is the Class of 1999.

"I always stand on chairs when I have something that I need to say so that everyone is sure to notice me. If I don't get high up, no one will see me because I'm short!" said Erica Campaigne, seen here sitting on the stage during her drama class. But Erica, you're out of character! Why aren't you standing on a chair instead of sitting on the stage?

In the Impossible Years, Aaron plays the father of a rebellious teenager. I don't think he likes his "daughter's" boyfriend too much!

Can you guess who our Senior Spotlight is? He drives a classic car, he's been in Drama all four years of high school, he was Li'l Abner, and he's on the High Times staff. Still can't guess? It's Aaron Robertson!!

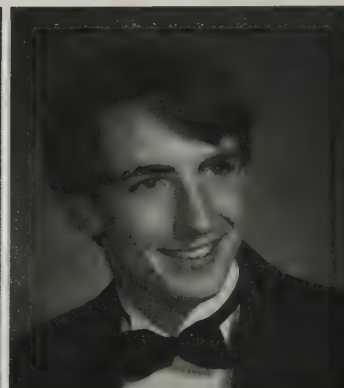

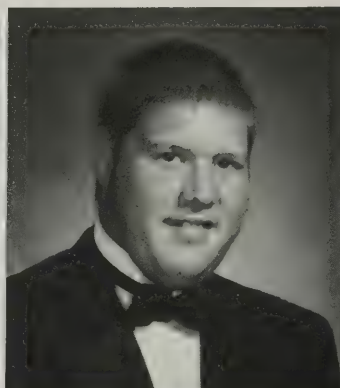

Aaron has been in all of the Waynesboro High School drama productions, as well as many of the Waynesboro Players productions. Last year Aaron was seen by the Waynesboro community as the lead character in Li'l Abner. He was also seen as one of Joseph's brothers in Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat.

Not only is Aaron a great actor, but he's a great student too. This smarty has been part of the National Honor Society as well as many other WHS clubs.

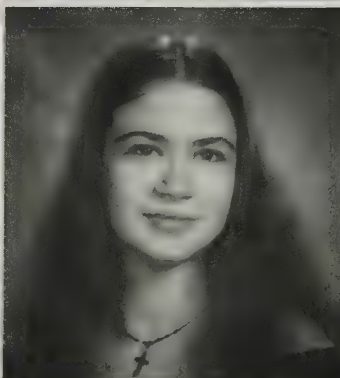

As recently seen in the senior play, Aaron records his thoughts about what life is all about. Aaron has also been seen in many Waynesboro Players productions.

Andrea Peterson uses break to catch up on some projects for crafts class.

Everyone needs a break every once in a while! That explains why, when you walk around Waynesboro High School during break time, you see so many students taking advantage of it! Break time is a time to catch up with your friends on all the gossip, eat breakfast, cram in some of the homework you forgot to do the night before, or just get some sleep you "forgot" to get the night before. Junior Deeba Mahmoud said "All I do during break is just hang out with my friends." That's the reply I got from most people, but some students, like, freshman Clyde Anderson said he "likes to go down to the cafeteria and get snacks, talk to his friends, and walk the hallways." Junior Sarah Lawhorne said "I hang out with my boyfriend, Tanner!" Freshman Jamie Wood said "I like to hang out with my friends, of course, and pester the teachers!" That explains why some of the teachers oppose break!

My Friend

Put your head on my shoulder
No need to worry 'bout a thing
I'll be the cure for your loneliness
I'll make you feel like you're whole again
And you can always count on me wherever I may be
When this world's got you feelin' blue
Call on me and I'll run to you
My friend

— Blessid Union of Souls

Over the years we have all come to find at least one person who we enjoy just being around. We laugh together and cry together. We hang out at our favorite spots and tell each other just about everything. These people are our friends and the good thing to know is that no matter where we go in this life or what we are doing, they will always be there for us through the good and bad. So as you go on to graduate or move away, make sure your friends know that you will always be there and will always be thinking of them because, "isn't that what friends are for?"

Katie Steidle and Locksley Fowler sign in for the mock election. The election took place this fall and approximately two hundred students participated.

Once again this year a mock election was held at Waynesboro High School. The mock election started in the early seventies and has been occurring ever since. Our school is one of the few schools in the state that uses real voting machines.

"The mock election takes away the fear of voting," says Mr. Shifflet. Mrs. Bell and Mr. Shifflet were in charge of the mock election and helped it to be one of the most successful ever. The mock election helps students learn about the issues behind the voting processes and the technicalities involved.

"The mock election is a good way to help students learn about their rights," Mrs. Bell comments. The election teaches students some of the responsibilities of being an adult and who knows, it may even be the deciding factor in someone's decision to run for president!

Mrs. Wallace displays her book School News Shows in the library at WHS. Writing is just one of her hobbies that she does outside of school.

More Than School

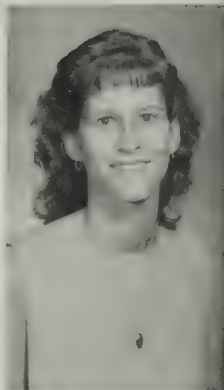

So you think all there is to teachers is school. Well it may surprise you, but believe it or not, teachers have a life also. I bet you did not know that Ms. Watson plays the accordion. Or that Mrs. Bennington was in a Gospel Trio and has also decorated for several weddings. Ms. Wimberger also sings in her free time, as well as runs and ice skates. And did you have any idea that Ms. Hilton, Mrs. Ciszek, Ms. Coe, and Mr. Hahn are all professional artists. Ms. Hilton, Mrs. Ciszek, and Mr. Hahn have been producing a variety of pieces in the form of Raku, which is a technique in ceramics. While Ms. Coe produces encaustic paintings. Yet not all teachers have hobbies in the cultural or fine arts, other teachers have different hobbies and other pastimes. In Ms. Curry's free time, she trains her Great Dane puppy. Ms. Wallace has spent her free time writing a book entitled School News Shows: Video Production with a Focus and also has had articles published in The Book Report. She also graduates from a doctoral program entitled Instructional Technology and Distance Education, in June of 2000. However, she is not the only one graduating soon. Mrs. Sherrill will graduate once she finishes working on her masters degree in secondary education. When she is not working on her masters she is planning and preparing for a two week study tour of France and Switzerland in June of 1999. So as you can see, teachers have more of a life than just school.

Moving Like Clockwork

Swoosh! The thrill of success at a game or meet is only one of the many pleasures of participating in school sports. Sports provide a break from the pressures of study and homework and allow a person to participate in something he or she has a good time doing. Sports are not all fun and games though, says sophomore Ryan Ostrander, "You usually get worked to death in practice but it pays off in the games."

Sports help people make friends, stay in shape, and learn discipline. Even people who don't play can enjoy a sport. Junior Adam Preski says, "There is more to sports than just playing. I love watching sports and being a spectator. Spectators give the games life."

By: Gavin Wade and Brent Wilson

Running through the park at one of the home cross-country meets, sophomores Seth Blanchard and Sean Mowen set a steady pace for the meet. Sophomore Sean Mowen says, "Sports are part of what makes school fun, you get to meet new people while staying in shape."

Are the Giants in the House Tonight

Are the Giants in the house tonight, ah yeah! Every Friday night all the Giants were in the house. The band had the fans "rockin" in the bleachers, every time the school fight song was played the fans got on their feet and cheered the Little Giants on. You could feel the excitement all around you, when the team would score a touchdown the fans and players would show their Giant Spirit.

Under the direction of Coach C.J. Dewitt the team won the Jefferson District title and advanced to the Regional Finals for the second consecutive year.

"Everything went as planned," said coach Eric Davis about the season.

Lee Blair, Barney Quick and quarterback Joel Gordon provided most of the offense for the Giants. "Even though we were short handed of players, everyone on the team was important to the success of our season," said junior Brent Harlow.

In regional play the Giants defeated Broadway for the first time in three years. Harlow said, "That was the best feeling ever to beat Broadway at Broadway." Brent feels that the team surprised the community with the success the team had. Surprising or not, the team represented the school and the community, showing everyone what the Little Giants can do.

"Time out guys" members of the 1998 Little Giant Football team huddle around coach C.J. Dewitt for some wonderful words of wisdom. Coach Dewitt's words of wisdom really paid off, the Little Giants won the Jefferson District Title and advanced to regional play beating Broadway on their home turf.

Team support is the key to winning big. Junior Brent Harlow congratulates teammate junior Lee Blair after a touch down in the Homecoming Game against Charlottesville.

In his first year playing football for the Giants, Brandon Wooten knew what he was doing. He showed everyone at WHS he could be the team's kicker, a skill he built while playing soccer.

20 HOOP 'N' HOLLER

Five, four, three...the crowd holds its breath as the ball is tossed high in the air...two...it skims the rim ... one ... and tilts into the towering net, just as the buzzer sounds. Excitement like this has been known to fill the basketball gym when the Lady Giants take to the court.

Finishing the season with a 7-14 record, the players all agree it was a "team effort" that carried them through the year. "I think we've played a lot of hard teams," Tiffany Robbins, one of "but it has made us work together harder."

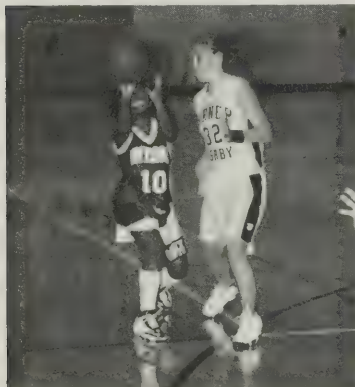

Tiffany, along with co-captains Sara Kirby, Olivia Zehringer, and the other ladies were led by Coach Jackie Hartley and Coach Candice Kimmitt. "We have a lot of heart and we enjoy playing, on and off the court," noted Coach Hartley. This was clear through the team's strong bonds: the girls had "secret pals" and enjoyed dinners at each other's houses before games. "We became good friends because of basketball," said Sara, who recalled how the girls would gather together before each game to pep themselves up with "chants, cheers, banging on lockers, and repeating the Lord's Prayer."

As the season came to a close with a loss to Charlottesville in the second district game, the Lady Giants' basketball team displayed many improvements that will be an advantage to next year's competition.

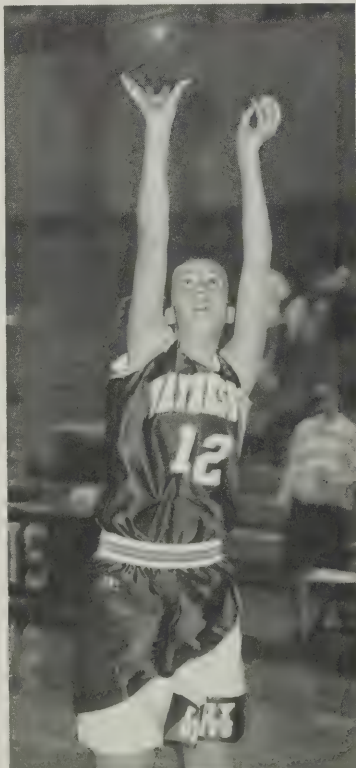

From this amazing group of ladies, Katie Steidle managed to win the title of MVP and made first team All-District. Her experience, along with the other returning team members, and the promise of the talent found in junior varsity players, will hopefully lead to another great season next year, when Ladies rule the court once more.

by Jennifer Holder

Stretching her limits, Natasha Tate refuses to let the ball slip into her opponent's grasp. With each teammate putting forth strong efforts, the Knights were able to taste Giant pride.

With a look of deep concentration on her face, Nicole Mason focuses on scoring a basket for her team. "I had to make it," was the only thought Nicole had on her mind as she attempted to accumulate more points for the Giants.

Driving the basketball into the line of action, Chisa Johnson fears no one as she fires past the competition. Shannon Goodwin stood right by her JV ally to block out TA and clear a path to the hoop.

Stepping up to the line, the Lady Giants watch as the ball is launched high in the air. Olivia Zehringer, Nicole Mason, and Katie Steidle prepared for a rebound after one of Natasha Tate's attempted foul shots.

"What goes up must come down," or so Sara Kirby and Katie Steidle hope, as they anticipate the basketball's slow return while trying to hold back their opponents. Turner Ashby was just as quick to the scene; but, tough cooperation was evident from our Ladies.

These perseverant Lady Giants, Olivia Zehringer and Natasha Tate, refuse to give up when others do. "It's amazing how much can be accomplished if no one cares who gets the credit," was the motto that perfectly portrayed the cooperation among these Ladies.

Holding her ground, Shameka Bowie prepares to keep Turner Ashby from advancing with the ball. Adding to the pressure, Krystyna Cauls and Beth Frazier stood by their JV teammate like a true Giant does.

With championship form, Jacobie Napier effortlessly guides the ball toward the basket as he attempts to make a basket from the free throw line. With Jacobie's shooting ability, the JV Little Giants are assured victory over the opposing team.

Adam Preski, a junior member of the team, battles for a loose ball as the Harrisonburg defenders swarm him. Adam said he loved playing at home a lot because of the huge crowds that came out to support them.

Bewildered Harrisonburg players and fans look on as Robert Salisbury "lays one in the basket", making the Giants almost unstoppable. Robert said, "I love dunking on people."

Tip-off Time

"And now for your Little Giants starting line up!" the announcer shouts to the screaming fans. The Little Giants stream out onto the floor in a flurry of purple and gold, performing a formation of baskets and dribbles. It's time again for a star-studded game of basketball in the Little Giants gym.

The Waynesboro Little Giants got off to a hot start with wins against Broadway, R.E. Lee, and Fluvanna County, just to name a few. In fact, the Little Giants went undefeated for three-quarters of the season. "We were hyped!" said junior Robert Salisbury.

The highlight of the season was the Little Giants' victory over top-ranked Western Albemarle. This game was hard fought and the team played well.

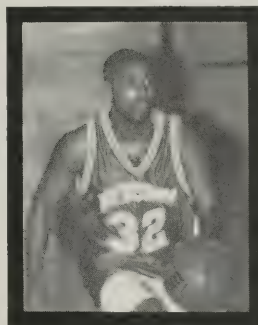

It was a nail-biter of a game, running up to the very last second. Likewise, the game was among the most crowded of the season. Does the aspect of a crowded gym add to the game? You can bet on it. "We had a good crowd. I liked playing at home. It gave us a lift when we needed it. The crowd was like our sixth man. I hope it continues next year, too!" said junior Adam Preski.

The JV squad had an outstanding year also. The Junior Little Giants went all the way to the championship held at Monticello. When asked how the team kept running towards the final goal, sophomore Jacobie Napier said, "Geoff Gunther and Dan Heatwole carried the team. They kept us working as a team to win games."

A Different Breed

"Golfers are a different breed of athletes than what you're used to," according to Coach Tim Teachey. The "breed of athletes" that Mr. Teachey referred to had ten competitive matches during the season. The first week of August started their mini-matches and the remaining five dual-matches were played when school started.

The district tournament was in the first week of October and the team took a third place finish. Freshman Brad Michael and sophomore Chris Fox surprised their teammates with a spot in the regional tournament. Both shot in the low 80s.

There was also an invitation quad match at Wintergreen against Harrisonburg. Out of sixteen teams there, the WHS golf team finished fourth.

According to the team, there was more to playing than just the matches; the bus rides home were fun too. With just six people on the bus ride home, the group was small enough to stop off at Ashley's Market to eat.

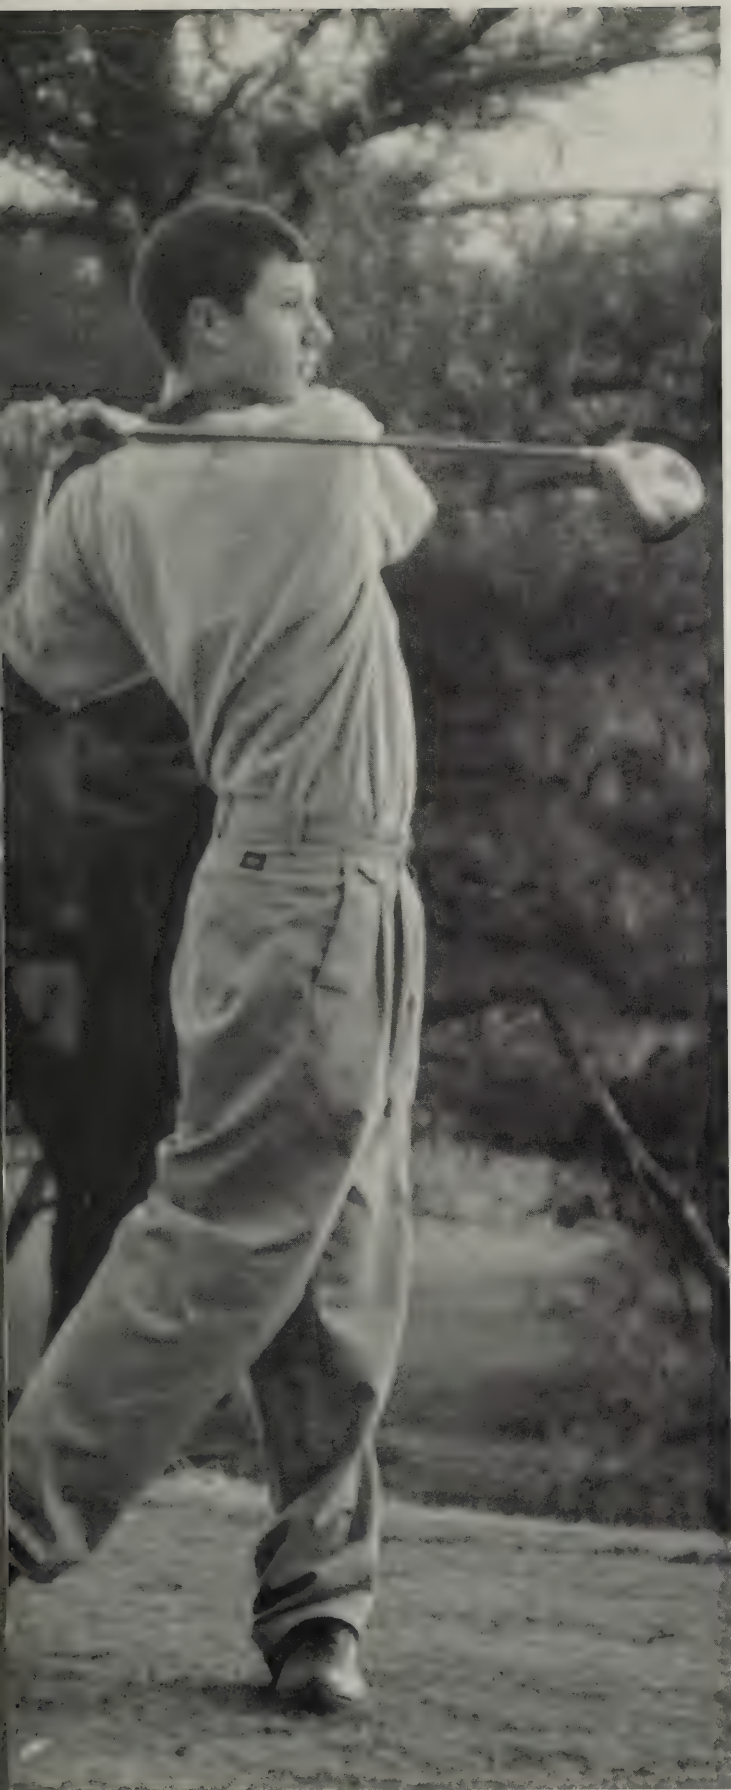

The team was also superstitious. It seemed that using a Titleist golf ball sometimes brought luck, and sometimes embarrassing moments. In the end, the team prevailed with a close finish for fourth place for the year, based on talent and hard work, not superstition.

Another tremendous swing for Brad Michael. He stops to watch his ball soar through the sky to the 4th hole. Brad played the number one spot on the team during the season.

Will Runkle keeps his eye on the ball, as it flies straight to the 9th hole. Will played the second spot on the team for the majority of the season.

Chris Fox keeps focused on this ball, as he pulls his club back. He is preparing to send the ball all the way to the green with this mighty swing.

They'll be coming 'round the Mountain

Most runners have a goal in mind at the beginning of a race, whether it be running a specific time, beating another runner, or being the first to the refreshment table to enjoy the snacks provided by parents. Inspirations such as these helped this year's cross country team compete in both districts and regionals. They were victorious in all but one meet, coming in second at districts and placing ninth at regionals. Melanie Matthews continued on to place thirteenth at the state meet.

"All those strenuous practices after school paid off," said junior Leah Rose. The team met Monday through Friday at Ridgeview Park from 3:30-4:45. Sophomore Kristin Burgess said, "We all gave our best effort."

Home meets were also held at Ridgeview Park where they would run a challenging 3.1-mile course around the soccer fields, across the bridge, and past the playground equipment. "We were a great team with great individuality," said Brent Wilson.

This year's co-captains, Stacy Hullett, Kimmie Schurz, Ben Rottenborn, Ryan Ostrander, and Melanie Matthews provided inspiration and motivation. They also assisted in starting the practices, pre-meet warm-ups, and keeping the team excited. Holland Hersey summed it up by stating, "All the runners, old and new, made a contribution at one point during the season." Mrs. Schurz and Mr. Driskill, played a large role in the success of the team. The coaches organized practices and planned the banquet for the runners at the end of the year. Between the talent, and hard work of the team, and the perseverance of the coaches, 1998-1999 proved to be a rewarding year.

Sighing a breath of relief as he crosses the finish line Geoff Gunther is relieved that the race is over. Mr. Charlie calls out his time as coach Schurz records it WHS cross country girls team enjoy a light moment after a grueling race against Western Albermarle. The lady giants ran a good race but were unable to defeat the warriors.

Battling for the finish line David Marbury and Josh Bucher sprint home. Both finished in good time.

Senior Melanie Matthews chats with junior Amy Shifflett after a home meet at Ridgeview Park. Amy gives a long sigh of relief and said, "I'm so glad that is over."

Lawson Ricketts paces himself as he nears the two mile mark at a home meet. Jimmy Belcher is close behind pacing himself with Ricketts.

"My favorite part of cheerleading is getting to know the squad, making new friends and being bubbly!" said Kimberly Haymes of the girl's basketball squad, shown here performing one of their many stunts to motivate and entertain the crowd.

Showing her happiness at how well the football team was doing in that particular game, junior Jennifer Hashagen "raises the roof" to the crowd.

"GO LITTLE GIANTS!!!!" At a pep rally, two squads team up to show the school just how great the Giants really are. The football squad, girl's basketball squad, and WHAT??? The sophomore guys? After the sophomore guy cheerleaders won the powder puff cheering competition, they were invited to help out the girls cheer at the homecoming pep rally.

During the boy's basketball season, their cheerleaders did plenty of stunts to keep them motivated. "I love cheering for boy's basketball," said senior Kathryn Garber, "It's so great to see the looks on the crowds' and players' faces when we cheer for them."

ARE THE GIANTS IN THE HOUSE TONIGHT??? AAAAHHHH YEAH!!!

Every high school has its teams; every high school has its cheerleaders – they are a vital part of school life. Cheerleaders bring pep to everything they do. What makes our cheerleaders different? Our cheerleaders are the best!!!!

Throughout the year, WHS is privileged enough to have several squads of cheerleaders. The year starts out with football and girl's basketball and, right from the start, they grab the school's attention with awesome cheers and stunts. "We try to involve and entertain the crowd with different stunts, chants and cheers," said sophomore Kimberly Haymes of the girl's basketball squad. As the year progresses, cheerleaders participate in pep rallies and boy's basketball. At any given game, one cheer can be heard echoing through the halls of WHS more than any other. "Big dogs, little dogs, floppy eared pup! Come on Giants let's EAT EM UP!!!!" sophomore Teneil Blair said of the cheer, "It's the most motivating cheer we do. It gets the crowd really fired up!" And that it does! Whenever "Big dogs, Little dogs" is heard in the gym, one can see the screaming fans standing in the packed bleachers SHOUTING the cheer along with their cheerleaders.

Last year was the first year for the competition squad. The girls showed their spirit; they showed why they are the best and as a result, won the district title. To achieve the district title, they had to beat Charlottesville, Western Arlbemarle and Monticello high schools. When asked what winning would do for cheerleaders in the future, sophomore Becca Cook said, "Maybe cheerleading will finally be recognized as a sport."

Jo-Beth Boan and Lauren Slack

"And your 1999 Jefferson district cheerleading champion is...Waynesboro High School!" Tears flowed from the cheerleaders who had worked so hard to achieve this honor, and it was well deserved. This was the first year for a competition squad at WHS, but it certainly won't be the last.

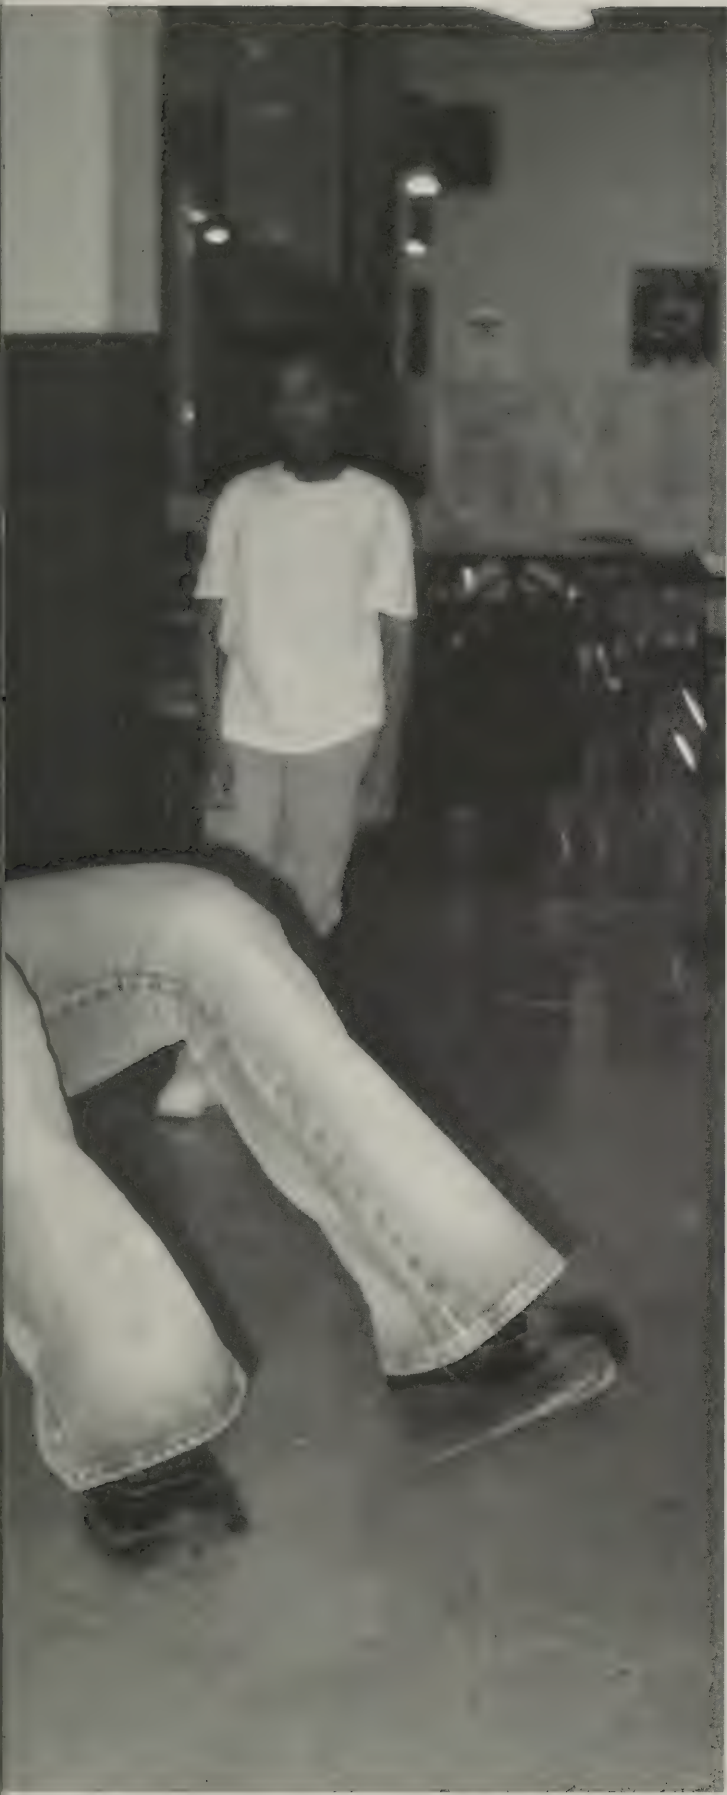

Shavone Dudley and LaSaundra Logan look on as Tiffany Robbins performs an aerodynamic Russian flip. Every Monday and Wednesday the STEPP team rehearses their moves in the cafeteria.

The team dances to a Swahili chant. Coach Harry Henderson describes their unique style as taking "Tae-Bo, aerobics, and dance and put them together."

Chanta Middleton strikes a pose in the practice of "The Valley of the Sun." The STEPP team has won the Super Bowl State Championship two years in a row.

Stepping Up

"The speed and coordination of this year's STEPP Team really amazes me," observes sophomore Amanda Thacker. The STEPP Team has had an explosive year.

Under the tutelage of Mrs. Davis, the STEPP Team has once again shown what cooperation and determination can do.

"We have had a great year so far, we won first place for the second consecutive time at the Powahatan 2nd Annual Super Bowl Competition," comments senior STEPP member LaSandra Logan. The team practices twice a week for an hour and a half at each practice. During the week of a competition the STEPP Team practices at least three times a week. They compete all year round, normally on Saturdays and this year they competed at Fluvanna, Monticello, and Hayfield High Schools.

The STEPP Team never fails to glue all spectators to their seats. The spirited cheers cut to the very fiber of anyone watching. Mixed with the power of the beat and the spell-binding movements they consistently prove why they deserve all their victories. The rhythmic clapping, slapping, and stomping overwhelm the senses and keep the spectators utterly transfixed. It is apparent to all that watch the STEPP Team that they have clearly gone a step beyond any other sports team.

Patrice Durette, Andrea Jackson, and LaSheika Howard clap to the beat. "Without Ms. Davis, none of this would be possible regarding the STEPP team," says head coach Harry Henderson.

Setting the Pace to Win the Race

RUNNERS...SET...BANG! At the sound of the gun Waynesboro High School track members try their best to beat their opponent. Several members of the Indoor and Outdoor track teams stood out this year for their accomplishments including Jo-Beth Boan who qualified for States in the pole-vault (Indoor), the boys Indoor relay team composed of Jimmy Belcher, Brent Carver, Eric Washington, and David Marbury, and Leah Rose in the 55m hurdles (Indoor). The best thing about States was that "We got money to go out to dinner and we all went to the Texas Steak House," said Leah Rose.

As for the Outdoor team, many people participated and enjoyed track. First year runner Sarah Caulkins said, "I loved it, but it was very difficult for me because I was out of shape." Viviane Theophilo commented on her track experience that, "It was the best thing for me and the place where I found real friends." In Districts the girls' team performed well placing third behind Charlottesville and Western Albemarle. Going on from the Regional level to States was Jo-Beth Boan in the pole-vault, Katie Steidle in the high jump and Melanie Matthews who placed second in the 800m and 1600m running events.

"States was a wonderful ending to running at WHS. I can't wait until cross country at UVA!" said Melanie. The boys' team also performed well. Seniors Valance Lewis, Eric Washington, and Brent Carver all qualified for Regionals as well as Michael Spesock and Jack Coiner in the shot-put, Jimmy Belcher in the 4x100m relay and the 400m run, and Robert Taylor in the 4x100m relay.

Many other members of the track team improved their times and worked hard everyday at practices. Coach Driskill said, "It was one of the greatest groups I've ever worked with," of this year's team.

Exploding from the blocks, freshman Amanda Fritzer and Heather Tyler begin their 100 meter dash race.

Trying to "out run" and "out jump" the Western girls, juniors Courtney Staton and Leah Rose both ran their best times in the 100 meter hurdles. After the race Courtney stated, "Mastering my technique took a lot of focus and energy, but it was well worth it at the end of the year."

Senior Erik Washington focuses on the finish line in the 100 meter dash. He came in 1st place in his heat with a time of 11.7 "Being a sprinter is like being a cheetah, trying to capture your goal." said Erik.

"Jumping is more than just trying to get off the ground, it's more like trying to fly," says junior Robert Taylor.

Giving it all she's got, sophomore Phyllis Nicholson throws her shot put. Phyllis competed in both the District and Regional meet.

Junior Jennifer Holder along with sophomores Susan Orkis and Alexis Gaskins complete their final lap in the mile run.

Bump, Set, SPIKE!

The volleyball team had a total record of 22-3. They were district champions of the outright season with a record of 14-0. Also they were the district tournament champions. The team was the Region II runner up and advanced to the State Playoffs.

The teamwork on the court was the main reason they accomplished all of their goals. The chemistry between the players is what made the teamwork as great as it was. Everybody got along with each other and that made it an enjoyable season.

Four out of five seniors have played since their 8th grade year. Many of them, as well as other players, made the all district team and the all region team. Much of the team made it because the girls worked hard and pushed each other to do better.

This year's team was a "fun-lovin bunch" according to Coach Austin. The girls kept a nice balance of working hard and still having fun. The fun came in a variety of ways such as pulling pranks, telling jokes, or just having an enjoyable bus ride home from a victory. Overall the feelings of Coach Kimmett were that it was a successful season with a great group of girls.

Splish, splash!!!

"Swimmers, take your marks...BEEP!!!" Six freestyle racers dive into the water and begin stroking and kicking furiously in hopes of a first place finish. They swim the length of the pool one, two, three, four times before their race is over. And the winner is...the swimmer in lane three from Waynesboro High School!

That race winner in lane three was coached by SMAC coach Brett Figgatt, who has coached the swim team for three years now. The WHS swimmers worked hard with Figgatt at four practices a week so they may improve their times in any of the four strokes: butterfly, backstroke, breaststroke and freestyle. "My favorite [stroke] is the breaststroke," said junior James Sharp, "I'm always working to improve my time for that race."

Their races, though fairly short (most last less than two minutes), were definitely not easy, but that didn't keep these swimmers from doing their best and working to improve that best time. "I've swum since I was pretty young, but I've never loved swimming as much as I do now. The time I've spent on the WHS swim team has been great!" says freshman

Craig Charley, who had his first season this year with the swim team.

"Practices can be hard, but it's worth all the work put into it when you improve your time and win a race, and you hear your teammates cheering for you," said sophomore Alexis Gaskins, "I love this sport!" by Jo-Beth Boan

James Sharp energetically climbs out of the pool, after swimming his laps to prepare himself for the next meet. The Waynesboro High School swim team practices at the local YMCA.

The Waynesboro High School swim team is at constant competition with each other, to see which swimmer can make it to the finish line first. Each swimmer starts with a leap from the diving board.

Katherine Stratton skillfully makes her move toward the water as she descends from the diving board. "Swimming is a very competitive sport" said Katherine, a junior at Waynesboro High School.

"I love this sport!" added Alexis Gaskins.

Going for a strike-out against the Stuarts Draft team, senior Barney Quick throws his famed curve-ball. Barney has been on the team since his freshman year and closes his senior year with a bang by reaching the state semi-finals.

Warming up for a big game against Charlottesville, junior Brent Harlow prepares to receive the ball being thrown from second base. "You have to be strong in the knees and have quick reflexes," Brent informs us about being a catcher.

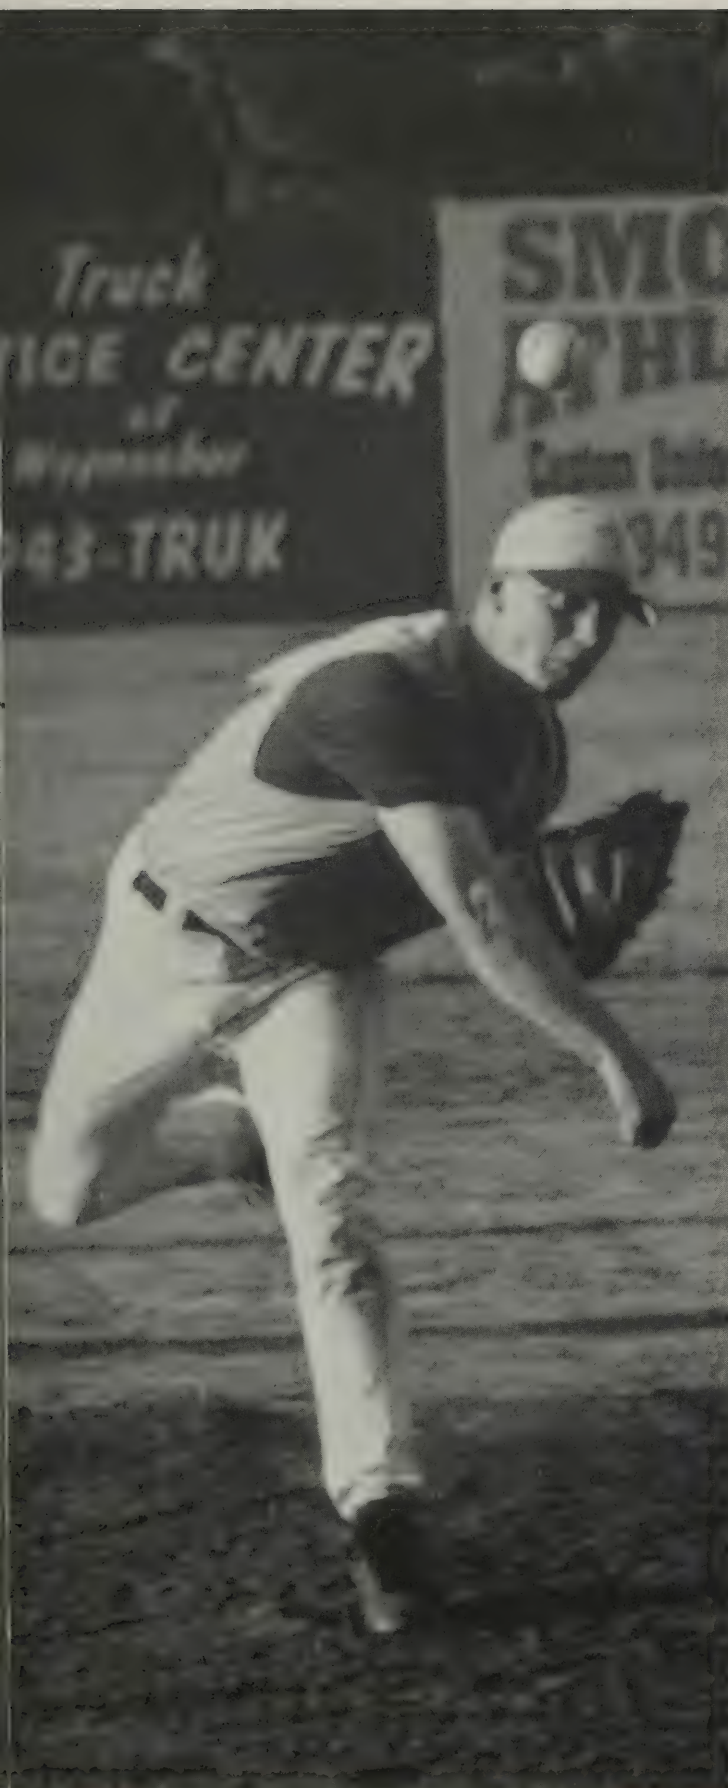

Showing Stuarts Draft and the rest of the fans what he's got, junior Jason White aims to hit one out of the park.

Imagine Candlestick Park, filled to capacity, as the San Francisco Giants take to the field. Everyone is in attendance, from the eighty-one year-old man, who played ball as a child with the neighborhood kids, to the toddler, who watches her older brother in Little League. Now, picture this scene on a smaller scale at the Kate Collins Field in Waynesboro, Virginia. Sure, these Giants are quite a bit smaller than the big leaguers, but for the past several months they were just as popular.

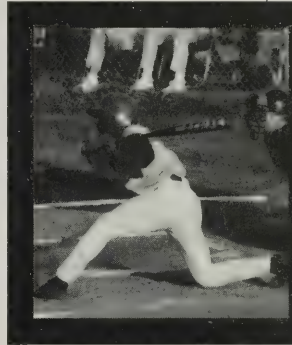

The WHS Little Giants had quite an impressive season last year; however, the excitement that captured the team and the crowd this year was immeasurable. Having played an incredible season, emerging from their beginning slump, the Giants showed their true colors: purple and gold. "The kids have come a long way since starting the season at 1-4," commented Coach McDaniel, whose experienced coaching skills enabled him to lead the Giants to the top. Each team member, ranging from the starter to the bench warmer, contributed to the 17-8 record held by this standout team. Several noteworthy senior players included JR Estes,

Barney Quick, Erik Henderson, Casey Severs, Philip Patterson, and Joel Gordon, all of whom were beneficial to the season's outcome. The juniors, making up the other half of the team, contributed many talents as well. Clinton Mize had a remarkable pitching season, and a surprise move made by bench warmer Dustin Jones advanced the Giants on to a longer playing season. Of his hit, which led to a winning game, Dustin said it "was the highlight of my baseball career." It certainly thrilled the fans and the community. "It was exciting," he commented, smiling from ear to ear.

Despite the unfortunate loss to York High School that finished up the season, the Giants' hard work and never-ending effort led them to an unforgettable year in the Region II Championship and Group AA State Baseball Tournament. "I told the kids before the game that there are a lot of teams who wish they were here," said McDaniel. "[They] never quit!" Uh oh, San Francisco Giants, better watch out for next year's Little Giants!

NO FEAR...

...And the Little Giants Softball team wins another game. The 1999 Girls Softball team posted a record of 10-10. "The season started off rocky but we came together and started winning ball games," said sophomore outfielder Kami Barbour.

Like all other teams at WHS the girls provided a lot of action for the supportive fans. "Even if we made errors the fans stuck by us, and we were able to fix them," said Kami.

The team had two players, Tiffany Baker and Trina Howard, selected for the All-Jefferson District softball squad. Coach Kerri Arehart said, "Tiffany's leadership was a key factor. She provided us with good team leadership. Coach Arehart also added that, "Trina did a great job of putting the ball in play this season."

In post season play the Lady Giants lost to the Nelson County in the second round of the Jefferson District tournament. As this year's team says goodbye to this year's senior members of the squad, the young team hopes to return next year a stronger team than ever.

The sun is shining, the crowd is growing, and the team is excited and ready to go. Here, the Lady Giants prepare for another great game and show absolutely no fear and that they're up to the challenge.

What form! Kami Barbour winds up and shoots the ball back to the diamond and assists in an out for the visiting team.

Team Strengths.... On and Off the Field

Finishing with a whopping 10-6-1 record, the WHS varsity team had a powerful season. The varsity team was effectively defended by defense

Becky Cunningham, Jennifer Hashagen, Mandy Fowler, and Megan Van Huss, along with keepers Dee Moyer and Katie Steidle. The team's best game was a win over Monticello and tied with Western Albemarle. Each week, the Lady Giants practiced an average of six hours and played two games. When asked who the team feels is their leader, "it was Becky, because she never lets down and always brought the team up," said sophomore Megan Van Huss. "She showed determination no matter what, had enthusiasm, and encouraged and congratulated all members of the team," added Katie Powers. Despite the most players, teamwork is essential to a soccer during a game. After a close match, the feeling is a combination of satisfaction and pride. Especially when they can "kickoff" their heels and relax.

Putting A Foot Down!

The boys' soccer team this year was one of the youngest ever. The team carried just two seniors, David Van Acker and Chip Campbell, and only five juniors. The rest of the eighteen-member squad was made up of ten sophomores and one freshman.

With the direction and instruction of the coach Marc Sweigart, the team was able to hold its own. Junior midfielder Ryan Hulton says, "We really came together well this year, even though we ran into some tough luck."

And tough luck they had. Due to reconstruction on the high school field, both the boys and girl's teams were forced to play at Ridgeview Park. The loss of not only their true home field but also their starting goalie, junior Adam Preski, threw a monkey wrench into their gears.

Goalkeeper Adam Preski broke his left hand against Western Albermarle when he made a save and rolled his hand under his body. Junior Erik Spahr, who had previously played mid-field, was forced to step up and play in Adam's place. Despite these changes, team captains Til Maddox and David Van Acker were able to rally the young team to place fourth in the regular season.

Five members were awarded places on the All-District Teams.

Captains David Van Acker and Til Maddox made First Team All-District. Sophomore Ryan Ostrander made Second Team All-District and sophomore Sean Mowen and junior Brandon Wooten earned honorable mention.

Even though the team this year was uncharacteristically young they did an outstanding job. The Waynesboro boy's soccer team will definitely be a team to watch in years to come as they continue to improve.

Student David Van Acker shows his soccer skills as he powerfully kicks the soccer ball just fast enough to keep it away from the opposing team. The opposing team tried, but none of them can keep up with David.

Student Ryan Hulton shows the opposing team what he can do in his attempt to escape from the other team. The opposite team tries to steal the ball, but none of them can keep up with Ryan.

Ryan Hulton once again forces his way to the front, as he power kicks the soccer ball away from the opposing team. Ryan is known for his energized way of stealing the ball.

Team captain Til Maddox blasts a shot to the goalie with his head. Defender Geoff Gunther watches expectantly.

Causing Quite a Racket!

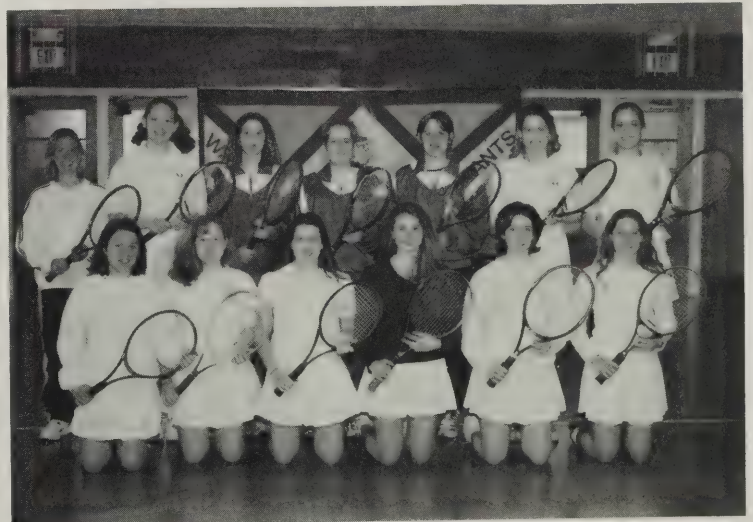

Aggressiveness. Consistency. Building a foundation. These were the main focal points for this year's Girls Tennis Team, which finished a stunning second in the district. "I thought the team played really well," pondered senior Kimmie Schurz, as she looked back on how the young women pulled together to attain such success.

Needless to say, everything did not come easily. Countless hours were spent focusing on volleys, ground strokes, follow through, back hand, and serves. This helped prepare the players for matches that usually last about two hours (doubles first, then singles).

But it was all worth it, according to Shelly Reitenauer, not just for the victories, but for the connections with peers, "I will always remember all the friends I have made on tennis team." Keep your eyes peeled for a future Stefi Graf...the next one may be from WHS!

BOYS TENNIS REGIONAL CHAMPS

(finally enough to get new t-shirts)

Each year, about March, the Spring sports try-outs begin. This year the tennis boys came out to the try-outs with a thought of winning on their minds and a grip on their rackets.

With the exception of two new freshman and a junior, the team consisted of players returning from the previous year; it was to be a regular season with wins and losses. But they would soon see otherwise. The practices started off normally in the thirty-degree, March weather but warmed up as the season began. As the district matches were played, the boys found their spots on the ladder and with the efforts of seniors Ben Rottenborn, Daniel Leech, John Leeth, and James Mahoney, the team consistently won. When the regular season came to a close it was clear to see who were the champs, considering that out of the eight matches of the regular season, Waynesboro Boys tennis had been undefeated. "Without Coach we wouldn't have been able to do it," recalls senior Daniel Leech of the tennis season. The boys then went on to the District Championship, where they defeated Western Albermarle eight games to one. It was a good season for all the spring sports teams but to the boys of the tennis team it was a great season.

"Agility has a lot to do with it," remarks Coach Dewitt about the overall game of tennis. And hearing the words from Coach's mouth, Senior Daniel Leech demonstrates his agility as he strides for the ball in a match against Stuarts Draft.

While waiting for the team from Stuarts Draft High School to arrive, Coach C.J. Dewitt discusses the ladder and strategy for the upcoming match. The team members take in the information, making sure to contribute their own feelings, and as sophomore Lawson Ricketts says, "It's more fun joking around with the team before the match than playing it."

As senior Ben Rottenborn warms up for a match against Monticello, he concentrates on his performance and hopes to play a good game. "Ben has always been a good player. Ever since his freshman year, he has been getting better and playing harder," replies Coach Dewitt about his first seat player.

Getting in the rhythm, junior Brian Willis lunges for a shot in an exhibition match against Western Albermarle. Brian has been on the team since he was freshman and intends to stay with it throughout his senior year.

Accepting the District Championship trophy, senior Ben Rottenborn gets a round of applause from both Western Albermarle and his fellow teammates.

Showing some skin and maintaining an angry face, junior Gavin Wade serves the match point for a doubles match against Charlottesville. "You always have to make a scary face to intimidate the opponent or at least make them laugh," jokes Wade recalling the match.

Pin'em down on all fours

The Waynesboro Little Giant Grapplers had a banner season. Posting a record of 4-0 in the district and a 8-9 record overall, the Little Giants brought home the Jefferson District title for the first time in history. Sophomore Justin Wood said, "It felt really great to know that I contributed to the team in helping them scoop up the very first Jefferson District Championship."

With only three seniors, Chip Campbell, Danny Bell, and Chris Jones, the young team proved they could get the job done under the direction of head coach Jon Bryant and assistant coach Tim Hubble. The Giants not only won the district, but two of their fellow Grapplers, Danny Bell and Chip Campbell, came away with wins at the regional tournament.

Both also traveled to the Salem Civic Center in Salem, Virginia for the State Wrestling Tournament. Danny wrestled very well and Chip brought home the gold, winning the state title in his weight class. "I was very ecstatic when I won the title," said Campbell.

After a banner season the 1998-1999 Waynesboro Little Giant Grapplers showed that they deserve their district banner hanging in the Little Giant gym.

"I won't let him pin me," is the thought going through sophomore Daniel Rickman's head, as he tries to maneuver his out of being pinned during a match in the latter part of the season. He will be back next year to help win other title.

Showing off his moves, Chris Jones gets ready to pin down his opponent from Turner Ashby at the Daily News Leader Tournament. This is Chris's last year wrestling for the Little Giants, he will be graduating as part of the Class of '99.

In his second year wrestling for WHS, sophomore Justin Wood tries not to let his opponent second guess him during a match early in the season. Justin will be back next year in hopes of winning other district title.

State Wrestling Champion Chip Campbell tries his best to pin his opponent. Chip had a memorable season, showing everyone at WHS that a little hard work and dedication pays off.

BRINGIN' HOME THE GOLD

And the award goes to? Many WHS students have heard this as the end of the year comes to an end.

The Little Giant baseball team had five players named to the first team All-Jefferson district. Third baseman and pitcher Barney Quick was named the 1999 Jefferson District Baseball player of the year. Barney finished the season over .500 at the plate and was 5-1 with a 2.06 ERA on the mound. He also received first team honors at third base and received second team honors for pitching. J.R. Estes was a first team selection at first base with a .490 average. Phil Patterson, who led the district with nine homeruns, was selected for first team all-district at second base. Senior Joel Gordon and junior Tracy Blair also received first team honors in the outfield.

Clinton Mize, who sported a 2.14 ERA and struck out 34 batters received second team honors. Jason White, Brent Harlow, Erik Henderson, Casey Severs received honorable mentions for their respective positions.

Junior Sarah Rilinger gets ready to kick the ball into the net. Sarah received first team all-district honors and was the leading scorer with 11 goals. She also added five assists which gave her 27 total goals scored.

Sarah Rilinger and Becky Cunningham were named first team all district for their contributions to the Lady Giant soccer team. Senior David Van Acker and sophomore Til Maddox were also named to the first team all-district.

Seniors Ben Rottenborn and Daniel Leech were district double champions. Ben Rottenborn also was named district singles champion.

One of coaches at WHS also received an award, Coach Derek McDaniel was named Jefferson District Coach of the Year for the second straight year. Everyone here at WHS would like to wish senior athletes the best of luck in their future. And those who are returning, the best of luck next year.

By: Amanda Thacker

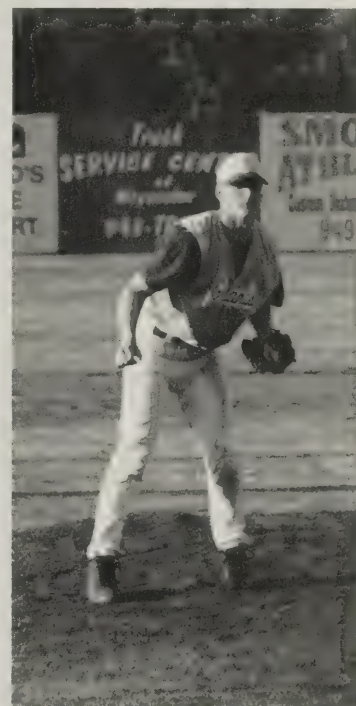

Phil Patterson waits for the ball to come his way. Phil was named first-team all district at second base and he also led the district in homeruns.

Ben Rottenborn and Daniel Leech work their magic. Coach Dewitt said, "They are good boys and they put their all into the game."

Barney Quick, who received the Jefferson District Player of the year award, watches to see what the umpire will call the pitch. "Barney is a great player and he will succeed in the future," said Coach McDaniel.

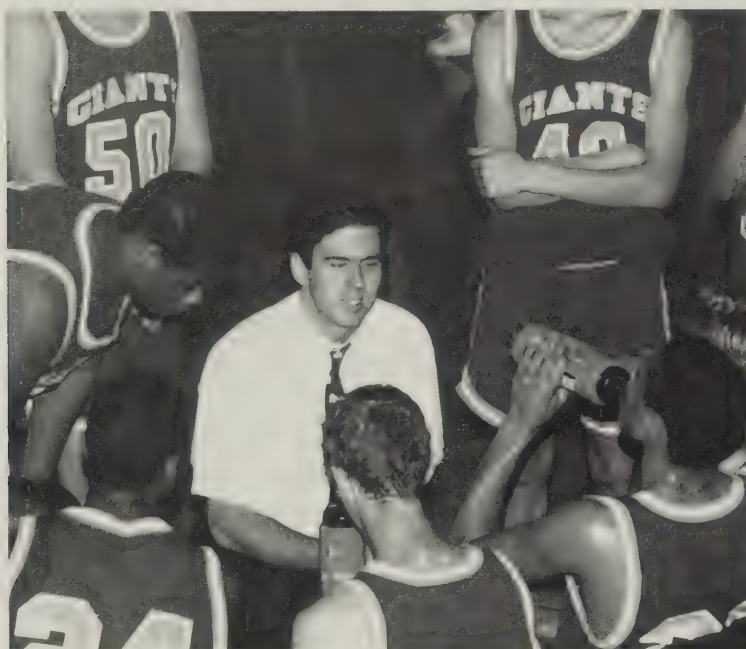

J.R. Estes watches the plate and the runner as the next hitter comes up to bat. J.R. watched all the runners that passed his base like a hawk this year.

Coach McDaniel cheers in pure delight, as he watches his players round the bases after a homerun was just hit.

Coach Driskill smiles as he watches his cross-country athletes finish the work out that made them run twice as hard at the meet the next day.

Coach Sweigart gives a few words to his tired basketball team during a time out. These words re-energized the team and made them go out and destroy the other team.

In this time-out, Coach Austin and Coach Kimmett keep the volleyball team in bright spirits, so they can stay focused on just playing the game. This in turn leads them to victory.

WHAT IS A COACH?

Anybody that plays a sport knows how much a coach matters. Coaches keep the team together, and organize everything so it goes just as planned. They keep the team pumped up when there is nothing to be pumped up about. There is so much to a coach you can not just write it down, but any athlete knows what there is to a coach. They just feel it inside of themselves, like how Tracey Blair knows about Coach Charley. He said "When I do something good, he still tells me I'm doing something wrong. I wish he'd come back and coach."

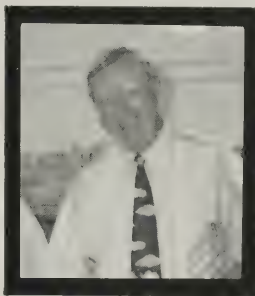

Coaches are always there, whether it is during season or not. They are looking over your shoulder making sure you do what is right and trying to keep you from doing what is wrong. Some coaches almost become more like parents to their athletes. No matter what the athlete does, the coach helps them and strives to make them better. A coach will push an athlete physically and mentally harder than any other person ever will. They do it to try and make the athlete better, now while doing this no athlete is happy or enjoying every minute. However, after it is done and the athlete does better than ever before, they are happy their coach pushed them as hard as they did. A coach is someone that makes you set goals for yourself, and then helps you reach them.

Hands of Time

If you think high school is just about books and homework, think again. Clubs are an essential part of the school system. Not only do they look good on resumes but they can also be very exciting. Through clubs, students help the community, meet new people, and travel to areas in the community. Some clubs, like the Interact Club, take trips to cities like New York. "Clubs are a fun way to take action in things you care about that you normally couldn't do in class," says junior Erik Spahr. There are over fifteen clubs offered at the high school. Joining is often as simple as walking through the door at the first meeting.

By: Gavin Wade and Brent Wilson

Lucas Harman, a junior, smiles broadly for the camera as he endures the closing minutes of class. Clubs usually meet in after school but some, like FCA, meet before school. Some clubs even hold their meetings during break and lunch.

Musical Traditions

Although it's hard to believe, it has almost been fifteen years since Mr. J. David Clatterbuck became the director of the Waynesboro High School Concert Choir. Even with changing times the choir has remained practically the same, with a few subtle changes, of course.

The Concert Choir is based on tradition. "For as long as I can remember the Choir has been putting on performances and I can't think of one that I haven't enjoyed," remarked junior Holland Hersey about the choir. Keeping traditions such as the choir benediction, the Christmas candlelight processional, and the recent tradition of singing the national anthem for sporting events, the choir has found that the audience relates to these traditions and begins to expect no less; giving the choir its prestigious reputation. The choir has also expanded its horizons with new ideas like making and selling a CD.

The Concert Choir has not only been a symbol of the high school, but also of the entire city of Waynesboro. Word spreads easily and the choir is definitely not a group that keeps its mouth shut. The sixty members of the choir show off their talents by putting on four concerts a year at the high school auditorium, plus countless performances at local churches and in the community. "My favorite concert has to be the Christmas Concert. It's the least amount of work," jokes junior Adam Preski, as he recalls his favorite time of the year.

With the final concert of the year the choir sings a farewell to graduating senior members and inducts the next group of members that will carry on the tradition. The Concert Choir has been an intricate part of our school and of our community for years and will be for years to come.

Swaying back and forth, the Concert Choir sopranos show off their singing and dancing abilities while performing the title number "Get Happy" in their Fall Variety Show. Beth Traynham, a senior who enjoys going to the shows, says, "I think the fall and spring shows look like a lot of fun. I wish I could sing, even though I can't carry a tune in a bucket."

At the Homestead on November 19, Concert Choir just gave an excellent concert for the Virginia Music Educators Association Convention. "It was an honor to be chosen to perform. Everyone enjoyed the experience and picturesque atmosphere," said junior Sarah Mastroiocco.

Ending in posed positions, some Concert Choir members swing as Gavin Wade, a junior in Concert Choir, led them in "Jump Jive an' Wail." They opened the second act during the Fall Variety Show with enthusiasm and excitement.

Dressing like a punk rocker and the Energizer Bunny with a banjo, seniors Jeff Finke and Aaron Robertson amazed the audience with their unique sound. Shortly after the beginning of their own composition, the crowd joins in the chorus

While the Concert Choir girls demonstrate their aggressiveness, the guys seem to show off their purple cheerleading skirts. During their Fall Variety Show, they sing "Buckle Down" as well as cheer for their team

After making a quick change from the song before, John Leeth and Philip Patterson dash back on stage to sing "If I Had a Million Dollars" during Concert Choir's Fall Variety Show. John and Philip are both seniors here at the high school Jaylyne Chupp skillfully spins her flags during the annual march to the bonfire. Students tag along with explosive excitement in their veins.

Playing one of their many fabulous selections, the Marching Band/Pep Band gets the football team fired up at a home football game. Directed by field conductors Kristen Bashlor and Teresa Lucas, the Marching Band devotedly played as a Pep Band for the football games.

*The Musical*Powerhouse

The band is a prominent source of music for the community.

The band is offered as an elective but is much more than just a class, it is a highly respected performance group. For years the band has branched out into all manners of entertainment. This year was no different. The band supports school events with its Marching/Pep Band. The band also performs publicly with the Concert Band and the Jazz Band.

The Marching Band and the Pep Band are actually the same. The Marching Band is a mandatory part of the class and, while the Pep Band is a volunteer group, it is composed of the same people. "Marching Band is a fun break from Concert Band and we play great music," says sophomore David Peltier. Performing at half times for football games and playing during parades are the main tasks of Marching Band. The Pep Band plays during the first, second, and fourth quarters of the football games and at the occasional basketball game. Both bands perform a large variety of show tunes and classic marching songs.

Concert Band performs a winter and a spring concert along with other concerts at elementary schools and local performances. The time in class is spent preparing for these concerts. "It's always hectic right before a concert, but somehow we always manage to put on a great show," says junior Gavin Wade. The Concert Band performs classical pieces as well as jovial modern tunes.

Jazz Band is a selective group that meets outside of school on Monday nights. The Jazz Band is a relatively small group and plays jazz and blues pieces in a more relaxed style than Marching Band or Concert Band.

All of the bands provide a variety of music to the school and bring a breath of fresh air to any event.

Freshman Amy Speck lays down a steady bass beat during the Homecoming Parade. The drum section provides a count for band members when marching to help them keep in step.

While twirling her baton, student Lori Floyd rouses the crowd during the Homecoming football game. The crowd watches in amazement, and stands to show their pride. Says Lori, a junior at Waynesboro High School, "Waynesboro's school spirit is awesome."

Student Kristen Bashlor shows her school spirit as the band rallies around her. The enthusiasm was in the air as the band cheered on the Giants to yet another victory. Kristen was the field director of the band.

LIGHTS, CAMERA, ACTION!!!

One of the actors (who also happens to be doubling as stage manager) knocks on the dressing room door and then cautiously opens it, calling out loudly, "Two minutes to magic circle!" We all acknowledge him quickly as we continue with our makeup, hair or costume – whichever one happens to be occupying our time at that moment. Three minutes later, the last cast/crew member finally straggles in to where everyone is gathered for our precious ritual of "magic circle." What is magic circle? It is a few minutes to begin concentration on the evening's stressful, but fun activities. More importantly, it's a few minutes to remind the cast and crew of the magic they create as soon as the curtain rises. That magic will never again be created by the exact same group of people – it is special to this single occasion. That the magic is new and fresh every time the curtain rises. And last, but certainly not least, that we should go out there and "break a leg!"

With the guidance from our director/teacher Ms. Wade, this group has learned what they need to know to create that magic again and again, and how to enjoy it as well.

I'm sure I speak for everyone who's had her as their drama teacher when I say "thank you" for teaching us, but for being our friend as well. When we move on to college and beyond, a few of us will continue using what you have taught us in other productions we participate in. Some of us even hope to make a career out of what we love so much. Those who do will carry with them the tradition of "magic circle" to other groups of actors. And all of us will carry with us the magic.

While everyone looked on with a mix of emotions (mostly shock), Dr. Kingsley (Aaron Robertson) shows Smuts (Sam Warren) what he really thinks of him and throws him back and forth, holding on to nothing but his beard! Meanwhile, Richard Merrick (Jay Humphries) made a desperate attempt to put an end to the atrocities.

"Ricky, stop! You're crushing our pizza!" said Linda (Kathryn Garber) to her boyfriend (Matt Frushour) in a failed attempt to stop his advances. Kathryn says she enjoyed the role because "it was fun and challenging at the same time."

King Furaday's three sons, Lewellyn (Mat Dillon), Markie (Jeff Finke) and Bumpus (James Covington) stand around in Wilson Elementary's gymnasium, wondering when their show, "Rapunzel" will start

"...the winner [of the dance contest] yanks off her t-shirt and shows what little girls are made of...I congratulated Linda on being the winner!" explained Smuts (Sam Warren) to Linda's shocked parents of how he came to meet her

"LINDA!!!" was not uncommon to be heard coming from the mouth of Linda's father, Dr. Jack Kingsley (Aaron Robertson) during the senior play "The Impossible Years."

Art is Long, Time is Brief

NAHS, Art, Crafts, and Photography

Michelangelo, DaVinci, Picasso. Among the many gifted students at Waynesboro High School, there may not be a Rembrandt, but there are those who excel in art. These students usually take an Art, Crafts, or Photography class where they learn in basic principles of making an interesting and creative work of art. "I like art because you can show how you feel in your art," says art student Krystyna Cauls. Throughout the school year the students place their pieces of art in art exhibitions and competitions such as the Baugher Chevrolet show and at the Shenandoah Art Center here in Waynesboro. "We have had many winning artists from our school," says Ms. Coe, an art teacher at the school, "and we are known for having one of the best art programs in our region." Another well-known program in our arts department is the NAHS. The National Arts Honors Society is a group of art students who are committed to art and have at least a 3.5 GPA. They do many projects throughout the school year, one that almost everyone saw during Homecoming week; they painted the windows of restaurants and businesses. This was to help support their school for the special week. So if you are ever in the need to look at some wonderful artwork, stroll down to the art department and take a few minutes to look around.

Rhinnan Berry smiles at the idea of winning a twenty-five dollar lolly pop. The Art department held a fundraiser to help pay for the annual trip to Washington D.C. If you sold three items you got a chance to win a money lolly pop.

Artist Lee Hazelgrove collects the soup bowls from Ernesto Mass, Katheryn Stratton, Candice Dyke, Seth Blanchard, Angela Defranco, and Megan Shifflett. The art teachers and several potters at the fall foliage festival made the soup bowls and WHS students glazed the bowls. All the soup bowls went to be used at a homeless center in Richmond.

“High Times”

/WHS Today

Waynesboro High’s Source of News

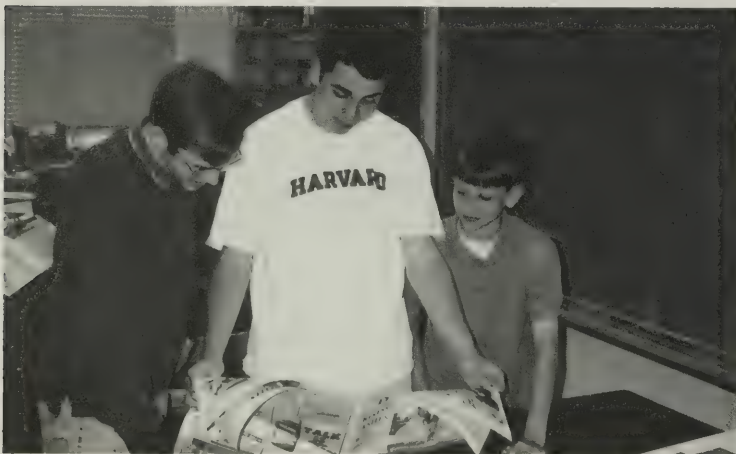

Every so often homeroom students turn on their classroom televisions and feast their eyes on the television show of Waynesboro High School, WHS Today. This student-created program brings us up to date on sports, activities, and news concerning Waynesboro students. Joe VanAcker, an avid WHS Today viewer said, “I like seeing people I know.” WHS Today worked hard this year bringing students fifteen fun filled minutes to happily jump start our day.

While the student body is tuning into WHS Today, the “High Times” staff is working diligently to bring us an outstanding page in the Waynes- boro News-Virginian. The paper comes hot off the press on Thursday mornings and is then read by the student body and the city. Patrick Blevins, who reads the page routinely said, “I like reading about the high school, especially the Senior Spotlight.” The “High Times” and WHS Today have done an excellent job this year in “spreading the word” about the events at WHS.

by Lawson Ricketts and Leah Rose

Jimmy Belcher is editing the WHS today tape while Brent Harlow and Jennifer Compton advise him on what should be changed.

Reading the Senior Spotlight in the High Times is a favorite pastime for Heath Conyers, Andrew Humphries, and Joe Van Acker. “The Senior Spotlight gives me a sense of knowing someone I wouldn’t know otherwise,” says Heath Conyers.

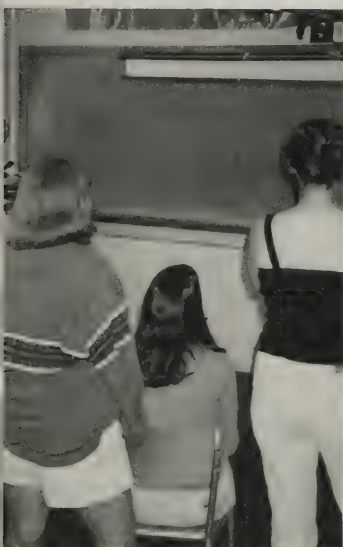

Mr. Taylor, the organizer of the WHS High Times reads over the last edition, “High Times is a good example of school and business cooperation. The school and community both benefit from the final product.”

Being part of the WHS Today team needs both someone in front of and behind the camera. Senior Bethany Cline does both along with the editing.

Junior Ryan Hulton will do just about anything to get a good story. Here he is doing some research about the proper way to put out a fire.

All attention is drawn to the tv. when WHS Today is shown. "I really like WHS Today, I think when the students put the time and effort into it it was really good. I just wish there was more of it." says junior Stacy Hullett.

Sophomores Jeff Gunther and Ryan Ostrander enjoy spending a few extra minutes catching up on the news.

FUN-raisers

"John? I'm compatible with John?" Looks of shock and disbelief, along with a series of comments, flooded the first floor hall outside of the cafeteria as data matches were distributed. Fighting to the front of the line, a wide range of students assembled to find their hidden, high school "soul mate." "Our first fundraiser was the data matches," explained Dustin Sheren, freshman class vice president. His class, along with the sophomores, juniors, and seniors prepared several different projects this year in an effort to raise money for their fund.

Senior treasurer Shelly Reitenauer explained that the members of her class were attempting to earn "enough money for the prom." Under the leadership of president Beth Traynham, fund-raisers included candy bar and card sales. Busy selling WHS sweatshirts and hats, the sophomores worked just as hard for the same purpose. "The fund-raiser is going very well, and the more fund raising we do the more money we will have for prom," said Amber Lilly, secretary. Unfortunately for the juniors, last year's officers held their positions without a sponsor for the majority of the year. "We still hope to have a JV show," commented president Brent Harlow, who worked hard to hold his class together.

Harlow was also intensely managing the Student Government Association as co-president with Amber Kelso. Representatives from each first period classroom met to discuss ideas about the year's exciting activities, starting with the long-awaited Homecoming. During Spirit Week, spirit links were sold and proceeds were sent to the United Way. SGA also sponsored the "Sock hops" after every home football game. Planned for late winter, the Sadie Hawkin's Dance was a topic of conversation for many students. "One question we had to discuss with our homeroom was whether the dance was to be formal, semi-formal, or casual," said Phyllis Nicholson, a representative. The majority of the students voted semi-formal, and, scheduled for March, the dance was added to the list of SGA's many undertakings. Needless to say the data matches came in quite handy for those single, young ladies looking for dance prospects, and "John" did not go dateless after all.

Excellence in Action

The Beta Club and NHS at Work

"Hey what a great strike!" These words could be heard spoken by Beta Club member Jennifer Holder to teammate Lara Wilson while participating in the Bowl-A-Thon held to fund the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Organization. This was just one of the service projects that club members were involved in. Mentoring students at William Perry Elementary School proved to be a major project members took part in all year. President Melanie Matthews said, "Mentoring this year has helped the little kids and has also given us leadership skills. This goes along with our motto "Together we can."

This year's Beta Club members showed themselves to be productive as concessions were sold at the fall Concert Choir Show to raise money for T-shirts, candy was sold to raise money for an end of the year scholarship, and a collection for the SPCA was held.

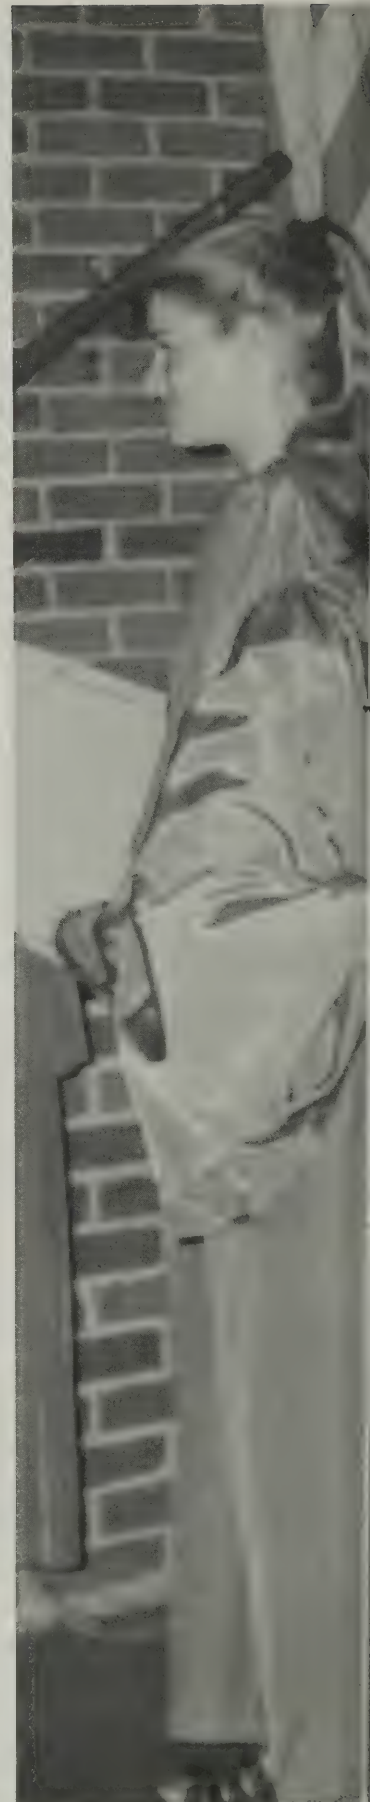

Like the Beta Club members, National Honor Society members participated in many service projects. Open only to seniors, the club is a select group of students who show leadership qualities and maintain a 3.5 GPA. Service projects are completed on an individual basis with one hour of service required each six weeks. Beth Traynham said, "A group of us raked leaves at Mrs. Sachlis' house when she broke her ankle. It was good to help her and we all had fun at the same time."

Other projects included, volunteering at the library, babysitting for Families First and peer tutoring, which according to Jay Humphries, "seemed to be helpful to a lot of students at exam time."

Volunteering their time and effort to the community, both clubs proved that they were excellence in action.

"Gee, that teacher must be really boring." No, actually it's 7 A.M. and dedicated members Jennifer Hashagen, Cary Adamson, Katie Powers, Lawson Ricketts, and Becky Cunningham of FCA woke up early to participate in activities to better themselves and learn more about God.

DEVOTED TEENS

Students Who Stick Around After the Bell!

When most teenagers were kicking back on the sofa, in front of the tube with a soda and a bag of potato chips, several Waynesboro High School students were "interacting" to improve the community. In its third year as a club at WHS, Interact has continued to display quality characteristics of leadership, service, and good will. "We sent books to Africa as one of our international service projects," said vice president Adria Ardito. Along with book packaging, Interact members have sponsored the blood drive, participated in the BIG's program, the Bowl-a-thon, the Fall Foliage Run for Hospice, and baby-sitting for the Families First held at Kate Collins. Freshman Sarah Caulkins, who volunteered to baby-sit, was amused by the variety of children that attended. "I re-learned how to play the games Candyland and Chutes and Ladder," she recalled of her experience. Like Sarah, a large group of freshmen joined Interact this year, adding to the promise of a prosperous future.

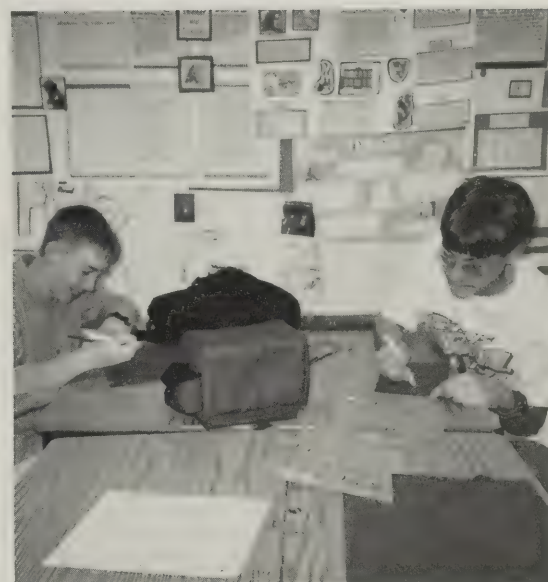

Other students chose waking up early on Friday mornings over after-school meetings. Under the direction of Tim Teachey and Helen Schurz, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes consisted of those who chose to incorporate church and athletic activities in an enjoyable school atmosphere. "Recently we played mat ball, which is kind of like kick ball, but a lot more interesting," commented junior Brian Willis. After these activities and a Bible-related lesson, most decided to stop at a local fast food restaurant for "soul food," otherwise known as breakfast. "Sometimes I hop in someone's car and we take off for Burger King," freshman Kristen Burgess said, while Jennifer Hashagen, a junior, preferred "going to Hardee's or Amoco with Holland [Hersey]."

Fellowship, food, what more could our school offer? Just remember that while you were silently sleeping in bed, tucked snugly under the covers, several other devoted teenagers were saying "a little prayer for you."

Hee, hee! Paige Holder and Jeremiah Edgin exchange a joke while making Christmas cards for teachers at an Interact meeting. The Interact Club distributed the cards to WHS teachers to make their holidays bright.

Filling the requirement of one international service project a year, Interact members Sarah Thomas and Jeremiah Edgin dutifully pack books to donate to South Africa. These used textbooks were sent to schools that were lacking materials.

During a Meeting in the guidance office, S.H.O.U.T. members Debra Freeman, Courtney Ray, Michael Bickett, and Beth Braxton, discuss an activity that they are planning. S.H.O.U.T. meets every other Tuesday after school to talk about any topics they feel need discussion.

Courtney Eaves, Philip Patterson, Katie Steidle, and Becca Cook get ready for the induction ceremony of the new officers. The new officers were chosen last year and as a fund raiser this year they sold candy to raise money.

SERVING OTHERS

Key Club and S.H.O.U.T. Help Out

Key Club is a service organization, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, that is involved with many activities in the community. This year the club held food drives and sold refreshments during the Glenn Miller concert to raise money for the fight against cystic fibrosis. "It not only helps the community, but builds leadership skills that can be used at a job or in everyday life," responds Courtney Eaves, a junior who enjoyed her second year in the club. Key Club meets twice a month to plan for their next activity.

Students Helping Others Unite Together (S.H.O.U.T.) is a group of kids finding ways to bridge gaps between cultures. S.H.O.U.T. was originally formed in the beginning of the school year to help Beth Braxton, a guidance intern, finish a class at JMU. The students had so much fun that they made it into a club which plans activities and discusses goals and decisions about making a difference to others.

by Julie Kane and Stacy Hullett

Key Club meets to test the Fire Safety House. "The house simulates different safety hazards and shows how to be safe in fires," says Becca Cook, a member in the Club.

Sponsored by Key Club, Mr. Giordano and Ashley Cook participated in a race at the Fall Foliage Festival.

Listening to a fire safety officer, Olivia Zehringer, Sara Kirby, Lori Cash, and other Key Club members learn how to educate kids about the danger of fires. After the instructions, they will go to elementary schools and pass on the knowledge.

FBLA and Environmental

Benefiting Others in the Community and World

"I like being in FBLA and Environmental Club because both clubs are interested in helping the school. The Earth Day project and food drive were both designed to help people," said Missy Henderson.

The Future Business Leaders of America have been hard at work this year striving to establish a secure career. The club jump-started this year by holding a fundraiser and then began learning about the different aspects of business. To get into the holiday spirit the club held a Salvation Army canned food drive in which they collected over 600 hundred cans to help the needy, showing their care and concern for the community. Not only does the club volunteer, but they hold socials where they learn more about each other. The club also supported a career day in March where many different people came and talked about their jobs, enabling the students to get a better idea of what career they may choose. Lauren Slack, a sophomore in FBLA, says, "I don't know what the future holds, but I may go into business; therefore, FBLA is a good way to get to know how a business is run." FBLA hopes to increase their learning of business professions, making them able to become "business leaders."

When students are not busy planning for their professional futures, they are taking time to appreciate and protect their environment. The Environmental Club offers many opportunities for students to become better acquainted with our planet Earth. These students were as enthusiastic about the environment as some students are about a football game. Junior Brian Willis, who is a first-year member, exclaimed, "I'm all for the environment!" The environmental club looks to leave their world a little bit cleaner from their efforts this year.

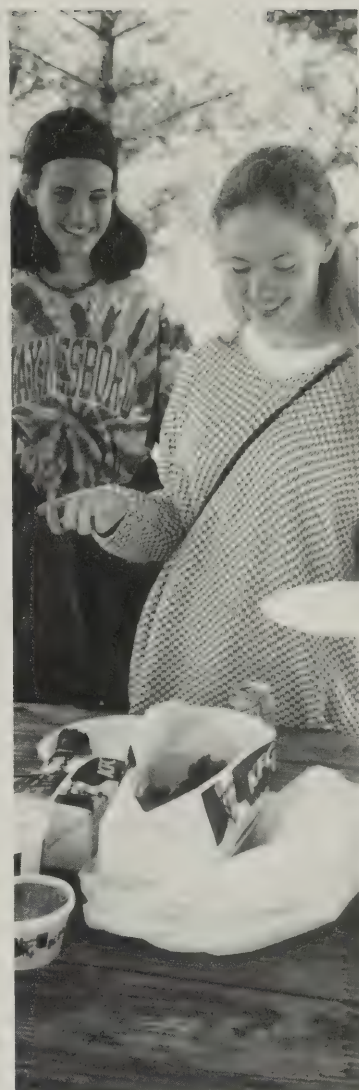

Attentively listening to Mr. Jim Nichols inform them about the recent excavations to the South River are Environmental Club members (L to R) Mr. Blanchard, Ms. Konizer, Courtney Eaves, Dee Moyer, Susan Orkis, Sarah Caulkins, Jamie Romesburg, Mr. Corwin, Brooke Slosson, Amber Kelso, and Missy Henderson.

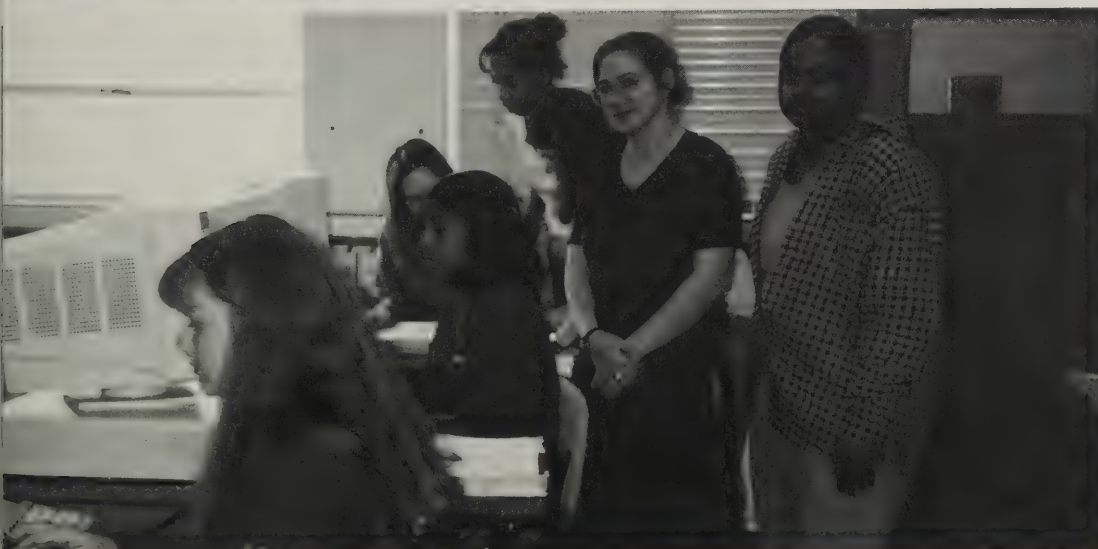

FBLA member Phyllis Nicholson, getting up from hard work at the computer. Most Future Business Leaders of America spend a lot of time working with typing, business, and computer skills Enjoying a pizza lunch provided by supervisors Ms. Hoggey, and Ms. Gilbert, FBLA members, Courtney Staton, Katherine Stratton, and Candace Dyke take time out from munching to pose for a picture.

After an exciting day in the park studying the South River, Environmental Club members Dee Moyer and Susan Orkis enjoy a KFC break provided by sponsors Ms. Meade, and Ms. Konizer.

FBLA members Niki Truslow, Candace Dyke, Shavone Dudley, Elizabeth Day, Heather Irvan, India Fairfax, and Shandie Hypes work hard to help the business department.

It's All Latin to Me

"Friends, Romans, Countrymen! Lend me your ears!" Many of us have surely heard this famous line from Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, but not many people hear the Latin language. With the help of the Latin program, though, Latin is far from being unnoticed. First, there is the Latin Convention held in Richmond each year in which only a few students are chosen to participate in the many fun activities. "I had a lot of fun, but it was sort of tiring," said Tara Weatherholtz after spending the weekend at the convention. The National Latin Exam, which is a Latin test taken nationwide and, if lucky, the students get medals for high scores. The Certamen, which is a very competitive Jeopardy type event. This year the second year and advanced teams that represented our school won first place trophies at the Mountain Valley Latin Certamen held in March at the Riverheads High School. At the end of the year the club has a Floralia. This is where the Latin students get a chance to "party" Roman style and have fun with friends. They wear togas, eat Roman food, and the older students even sometimes get slaves, the lower level Latin students, who get their food and do anything they are told to do which may include entertainment. Latin may be considered a "dead language" but the people involved in it certainly know how to liven it up.

"I love it...the snakes, the shimmers, they're you!" Tara Weatherholtz and Mary-Wickham Yancey dress as Medusa at the convention and go down the catwalk before the judges.

"Now that's my kind of horse, luggage space and all." Brandon Falls and Ben Bateman seem amused by the Trojan horse someone built for the art/model competition at the Latin Convention. It ended up winning first place.

What room do I sleep in? Mrs. Rottenborn hands out the room keys to Sarah Mastrocrocco, Ben Rottenborn and Bret Bartelme. Conventioneers got to stay in the Marriott Hotel, which is connected to the Convention Center

Competitive Academics

"Competitive Academics has prepared me for life better than any other event in high school. I can now talk freely and logically, with great persuasion when necessary." Clearly, senior Jay Humphreys feels strongly about his involvement in both the Forensics and Debate teams.

Being part of the Debate team is a full-time job which meets and competes year round. During the school year the team meets after school and has competitions on weekends. They travel to places such as James Madison University, Virginia Tech, and Virginia Beach. During the summer they attend workshops and seminars, which help prepare them for the upcoming year. The team has two different types of debate: a two-person team also called government policy and a one-on-one debate called Lincoln vs. Dougless. The Debate team has been successful this year.

Pop Quiz, which is a trivia competition between all area schools, was led by its captains, senior Ben Bateman and Ben Rottenborn, for a second place finish at the district meet. "It was an academic challenge, exciting and fun," says sophomore James Covington. Forensics, which deals mainly with public speaking from poetry to spelling bees, placed first at districts. Freshman Heath Conyers states, "In my experience with Forensics, it has given me a better ability to stand in front of people and express my thoughts."

Students from all grades should consider being a part of one of these teams because it will improve their public speaking skills, help build confidence, and allow them to research new topics and debates. These are all important skills for both college bound students and workers. Katie Hansen, a debate team captain states, "Of all the extra-curricular activities at Waynesboro High School, debate is the only one that can give you a real foundation in communications and research."

By: Leah Rose

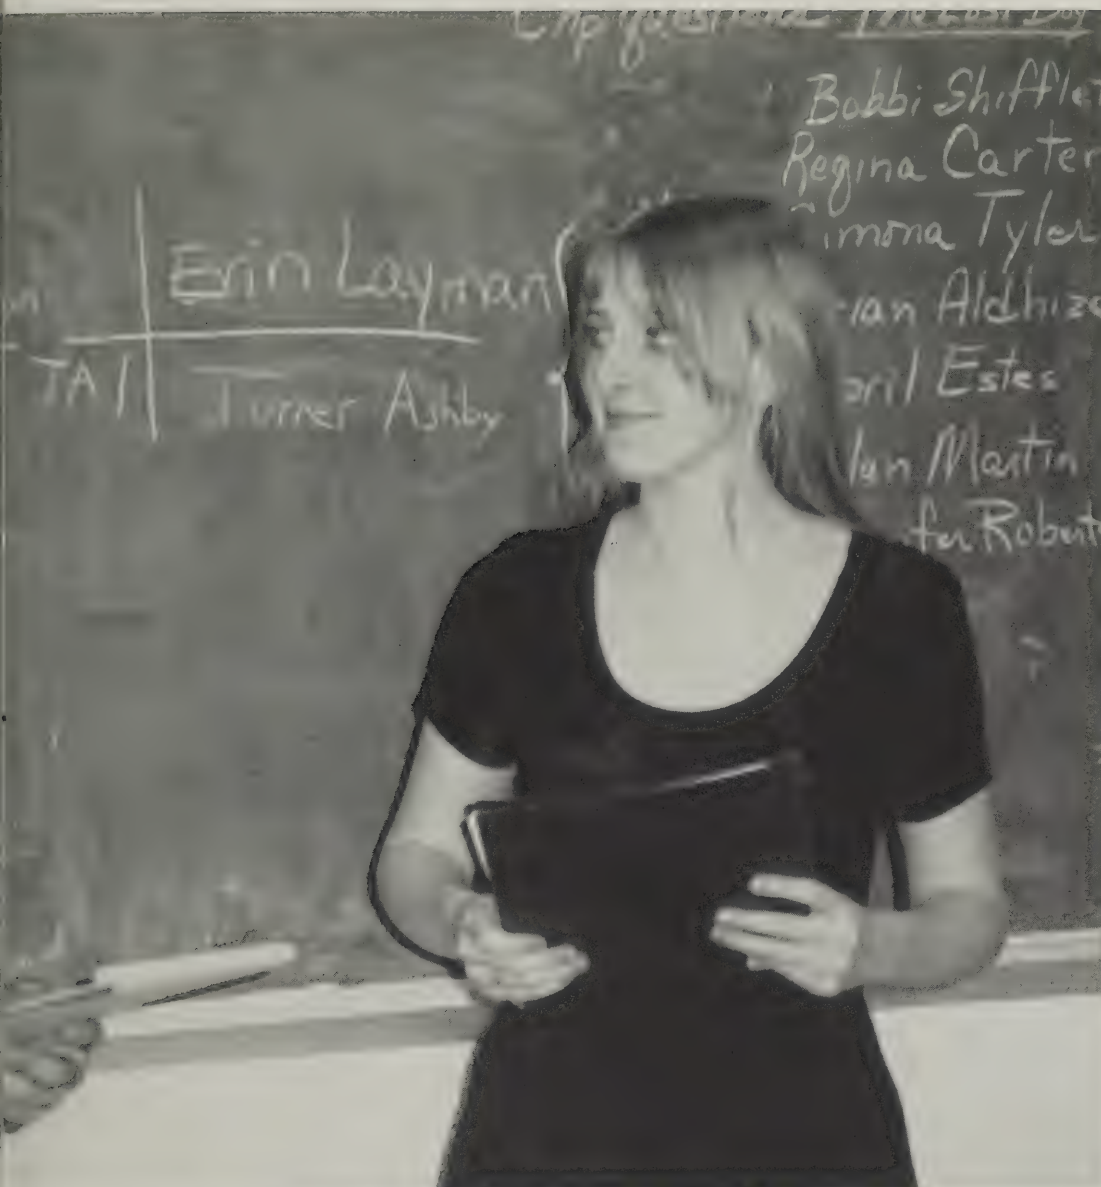

It's time for a little friendly competition! Sophomore James Covington smiles as he reviews his notes for his next debate against Turner Ashby.

Sophomore Heath Conyers and senior Ben Bateman decide who will go first during this competition as sophomore James Covington looks on. Heath and Ben have been two of the leaders this school year in bringing Waynesboro's debate team to victory.

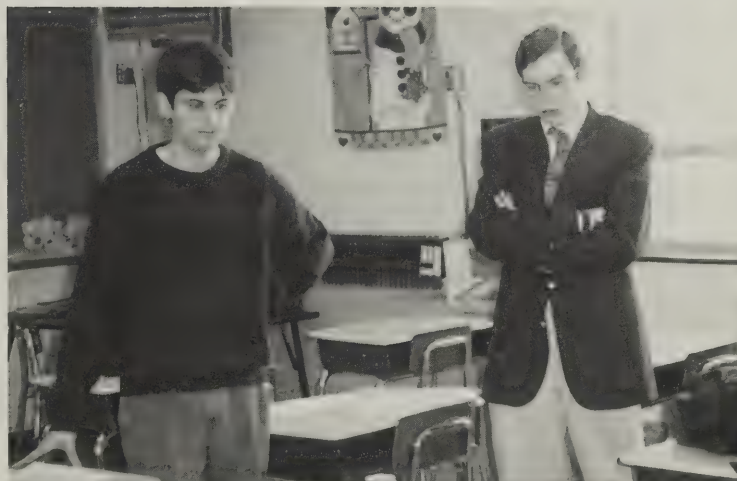

What are you doing? If you asked James Covington this question he would probably tell you he is doing research. The debaters have to be sure to fully research their topic before debating for or against it.

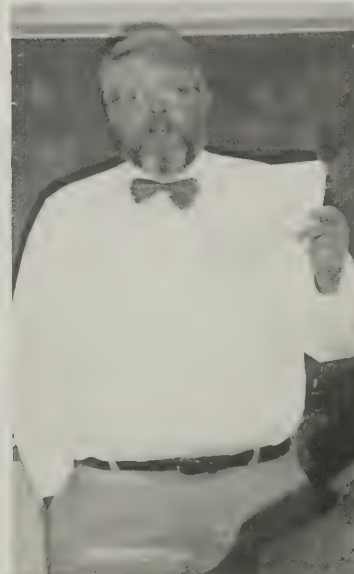

Time! Aside from debating, Freshman Andrew Humphreys keeps time for the Waynesboro High School team as well as for the others.

Mr. Covington, the debate and forensics coach, tells the debaters their topics for the day. Without his help, the debate team wouldn't have been as successful.

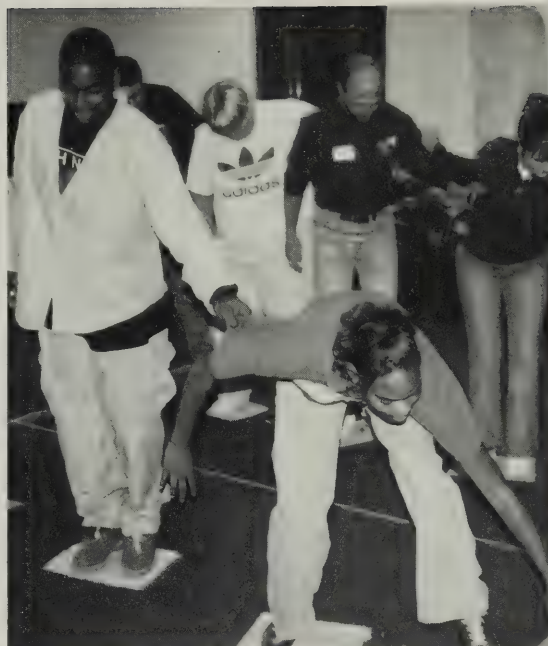

Pack up! After each tournament comes probably one of the least liked activities. Cleaning up! Sophomore Heath Conyers is responsible and helps clean up all the files that were used for the competition.

Deep in thought, Ben Bateman and Heath Conyers think of a comeback for the other team. Since the team has taken the road to victory, Ben and Heath must have come up with a lot of good comebacks.

Learning to work together as a team with "Critter River," sophomores Jermiel Haliburton and Krystyna Cauls slowly work their way to victory. "Critter River" is a team building activity in which the participants have to cross the "river" without falling.

Just hanging out and having fun, junior Daniel Freeman and sophomore Samantha Gallagher show their fondness for PULSAR.

Camp Out

Pulsar Participants Head Out to Camp Blue Ridge

"I can't wait!" "Will you recommend me?" These are questions that are heard every year right before a special program. What is this special program? It's PULSAR!!! PULSAR is a leadership development program in which students and teachers participate in many different activities. These activities help provide students a chance to learn how to work in teams, trust people, and find ways to help solve everyday problems. One of the team relays is "Critter River." The participants have to cross a "river" by only stepping on a couple of mats. The catch, no one can fall!!! Senior Amber Kelso says that the activities at PULSAR were a "rewarding experience that I'll never forget. I think PULSAR even helped me as a person." WHS teachers volunteer to chaperone and help the students with the relays and discussions. History teacher Carolyn Coyner often travels to Camp Blue Ridge as a volunteer. Students who go are nominated by their teachers based on whether they have good leadership skills or if they would, as Mrs. Coyner says, "benefit from developmental skills." Students and teachers enjoy PULSAR and most of them go every year. It may be one of the best activities that Waynesboro High School has to offer, probably because it's one of the only "stay over" trips that goes on during the year.

Senior Amber Kelso, freshman Carrie Ratliff, Mr. Giordano, freshman Junior Harris, and one of the officers from the Waynesboro Police Department work together to figure out a way to help each other. Skill building and team building activities were done often to help some of the students work together better. Junior said, "It was fun at PULSAR. I really had a good time!"

Sophomore Chris Brooks has had a flawless run, and is almost done with this fun relay. A lot of relays were done to help the students with their team working skills.

Aside from all the team building activities, junior Kevin Cline and sophomore Travis Davis enjoy a day on the river as they enjoy paddle-boating. Paddle-boating was one of the favorite activities which PULSAR had to offer.

Julie Kane – The best part is when we got the proofs back because you could see your work and it was neat.

Missy Henderson – Yearbook has been a unique experience for me!

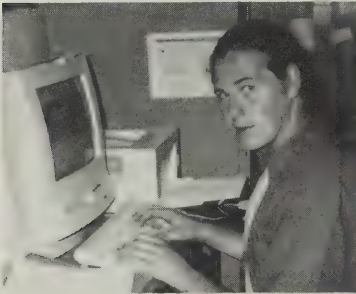

Amy Shifflett – Being on the yearbook staff this year was a great experience for me. I learned a lot about the production of a yearbook and gained new friendships at the same time.

Gavin Wade – Favorite part – getting up so wonderfully early!

Michael Spesock – Doing the yearbook is a lot of hard work, but it's fun and you're happy when it's finished.

Lawson Ricketts – "If we weren't all crazy we'd go insane." - Jimmy Buffet

Lauren Slack – When I went into yearbook, I didn't think it would be a lot of work. I love taking pictures and I thought it would fit right into everything else I do. Well, it was a lot of fun but yearbooks are deceiving – they take LOTS of work!

Amanda Thacker – It was a challenge and very time consuming but in the end I was proud of what I achieved!

Stacy Hullett – Getting to see all the pictures first was my favorite part.

Jo-Beth Boan – I never realized how much time and energy goes into making a yearbook – it's been interesting!

Jessica Keicher – I loved it. Yeah, the early mornings, headaches, writer's block and the wonderment in why I was there that early in the morning came with it. Actually, it was a good experience.

Christine Benson – It helped my writing a lot and yearbook was fun.

Leah Rose – I now have a better understanding about what stories and layouts are about.

"Time of Your Life," Volume 61 of Waynesboro High School's Skyline, was printed by Jostens Publishing Company in Winston-Salem, North Carolina with a press run of 460 copies. The basic theme was developed by Jennifer Graber, as inspired by the Green Day song, "Time of Your Life, Good Riddance" from Nimrod, WB Music Corp, 1997. The cover concept was suggested by Jessica Keicher based on the CD cover from Mr. Holland's Opus. The cover was developed further at a Jostens workshop at the Doubletree Hotel in Charlottesville, VA. The cover is a four color litho with endsheets printed on #281 silver tip with foil. 100 pound paper stock was used for the 8 1/2 x 11 trim size book with a total of 192 pages, 16 of which are color. Photographs were supplied by our contracted photographer, Gentry Photography. Other pictures were taken by staff members and teachers. A special thanks to Ms. Hilton, Ms. Burrows, Ms. Barrett, Ms. Meade, and Ms. Coyner, who all donated pictures. A special thank you to Mr. Peeling for making Yearbook a class, for finding us a nice staff room, and for supporting us in our transition from a spring to fall arrival date. And a final thanks to our section editors (and our chief editors next year) for helping design layouts and help with writing stories – thanks Amy Shifflett and Jennifer Holder.

Mrs. Graber – It was a great way to start the day. My favorite memory was when we went to Charlottesville for Jostens' yearbook convention. I had many laughs that day.

Ms. Wimberger – It was lots of work, but as long as I had my tea, I enjoyed the students, and all they had to offer.

Brent Wilson – Yearbook gave me a chance to get to know a part of the school I never knew before.

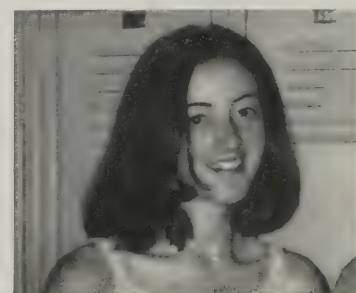

Courtney Eaves – My favorite part was learning about different clubs and sports.

Joe Whittaker – Worst memory – waking up early to come to class. Best memory: Yearbook convention.

Jennifer Holder – Having yearbook as a zero period rushed me around a lot this year, but it paid off when I was able to see the class' accomplishments. Maybe next year (when I'm awake), I will enjoy it even more.

Closing Time

At the end of the day students file out of the building on their way home, to their jobs, or club meetings or athletic events. Some students stay after school a while for help or makeup work. At the end of the year the seniors say farewell and high school becomes a defining memory in their lives. To every beginning there must be an end and to every start a finish. With this the 1998-1999 year shuts the pages of history at its closing time.

Proudly cheering on the football team, seniors Rhiannon Berry, Kathryn Garber, and Elizabeth Day enjoy one of the last football games of their high school career. The games and the proceeding tailgate parties are events that make high school truly memorable.

What excuse would you give for a late essay?

"I had it typed and I left for school and my bookbag was on the back of my truck. My bookbag was apparently unzipped, and flew out onto the road so I stopped and right after the 18 wheeler ran over it, I went to grab it and it blew down a storm drain. So then after I got a ticket from a policeman for cursing in public, I decided to come to school and tell the teacher I would try to turn it in tomorrow." - Brent Harlow

"My dog ate it, no really, my dog is very destructive and I have to watch where I have things." - Jennifer Compton

Fifteen Years at WHS*

Closing Time.....

Another turning point, a fork stuck in the road.
Time grabs you by the wrist, directs you where to go. .
So make the best of this test, and don't ask why.
It's not a question, but a lesson learned in time.

It's something unpredictable, but in the end it's right,
I hope you had the time of your life....
